Craig Gets Release But Is Not Pardoned

COOLIDGE REMITS CONTEMPT TERM GIVEN TO CRAIG

Daugherty Scores Comptroller of Gotham in Report to President on the Case.

ADVISES REMISSION AS HELP TO GOTHAM

Sentence Imposed Fully Deserved by Craig and Judge Was Right, Attorney Says.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, December 3.—Without condoning the offense, President Coolidge today remitted the 60-day jail sentence imposed on Charles L. Craig, comptroller of New York city, by Federal Judge Mayer for contempt of court.

The chief executive acted in the case—one of the most widely discussed contempt cases in recent years—upon receipt of a report from Attorney General Daugherty with reference to application of pardon for Craig made by Senator Copeland, of New York, and by members of the board of estimate and apportionment for the city of New York.

Mr. Daugherty in effect recommended against the issuance of a pardon and urged remission of sentence "irrespective of what Craig, by his arrogance personally then and now, justly deserves," but because execution of the sentence might have an injurious effect upon the administration of the financial affairs of New York city; because the sentence might be considered as too severe for one holding Craig's official position, and because, although Craig's own fault, no court had an opportunity to review the case on its merits.

Supports Judge Mayer.

The attorney general fully supported Judge Mayer, whose views were considered, in that whatever action was taken "it should not have the effect of approving, or seeming to approve, the conduct of Craig toward the court and should not be, in any sense, a vindication."

"Craig's imprisonment," Mr. Daugherty told the president, "is not the greatest or the most important question involved in the controversy. From his attitude he seems willing, if not desirous, to assume the attitude of a martyr, and it is conceivable that he would be more disappointed and punished by not being required to go to jail than he would be by serving his sentence."

The action of the president and attorney general in refusing a pardon but in agreeing to a remission of sentence immediately raised the question among friends here of the New York comptroller as to whether he would

Three Aviators Slain as Planes Collide in Air

Two Planes Crash Into Bay. Pilots Instantly Killed.

San Diego, Cal., December 3.—Three naval airmen were killed today when two airplanes collided at an altitude of about 1,000 feet at a point almost directly over the bridge between Coronado and North Island. The dead are:

Lieutenant F. M. Byers, 28, of Coronado.

Thomas B. Entwistle, aviation chief machinist mate, 29, whose widow resides at Pensacola, Fla.

Jackson and Entwistle, flying about 50 miles an hour, were nosing down preparatory to landing when Lieutenant Byers swung along the same course. Both airplanes crashed and plunged downward in a spin.

U. S. NAVY FLIERS WILL MAKE DASH FOR POLE IN 1924

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, December 3.—A dash by air for the North Pole will be launched by the navy department during the coming summer. Secretary Denby announced today that President Coolidge had given his specific approval to the project as "of great practical value."

The route, date and method of procedure for the trip, however, are still to be decided, a special board of naval officers headed by Rear Admiral William A. Moffett, chief of naval aeronautics, having been appointed by Secretary Denby to prepare a detailed plan.

The project grew out of the desire of Robert A. Bartlett, the explorer who sailed with Rear Admiral Robert E. Perry in the steamer Roosevelt on the expedition of 1908-1909 which saw the stars and stripes raised over the North Pole, again to make that journey. Mr. Bartlett proposed to Secretary Denby some months ago that the Roosevelt, now in commercial service, be repurchased and equipped for polar work.

Bartlett Called In.

Discussion of the possibilities of a new polar expedition was immediately begun in the navy department. It was pointed out by naval aircraft experts, however, that if a new "drift-

WALKER TO INSIST LEGISLATURE ACT ON FULL PROGRAM

COMPROMISE PLANNED ON INCOME TAX LAW

Conference Committees Probably Will Be Named by House and Senate Leaders Today.

Governor Walker is determined that the present extraordinary session of the general assembly act upon the full program of tax reform asked for in his call which brought it into session.

This became clear on Monday night, when, in answer to rumors that in event both houses reached an agreement on the Lankford income tax measure, he would not oppose immediate sine die adjournment. The governor, however, believes that a classification system of ad valorem taxation is necessary before an ideal system of taxation for Georgia is approximated.

"I am particularly anxious for the legislature to consider the classification tax measure," he said, "for I believe this law, with the income tax, will give Georgia an ideal system of taxation."

Income Tax Course.

Probable course which action on the Lankford measure will take, as discussed informally among house and senate leaders Monday night, will be for the house to insist Tuesday upon its amendments, which the senate has refused to accept. It is likely that then the senate will suggest that the matter be thrown into conference committee.

Then, it is hoped, the conference committees to be named by the speaker and president of the senate, will be able to reach a middle ground on which both houses can agree.

The governor is "well pleased" with the legislative situation in regard to the Lankford measure, he said Monday. He held numerous conferences with senators and representatives during the day in the executive department.

Plan Limitation.

It is freely predicted that the bill as finally passed will limit the taxation power in regards to an income tax to "net" incomes. The house, in amending the bill, struck the word "net" but this was replaced by the senate and there seems to be a growing sentiment in favor of the retention of this limitation. What the fate of the other disputed points—whether or not the bill should define personal exemptions to be allowed and whether it should allow offsetting of ad valorem taxes against income tax—remained doubtful, however.

Governor Walker said Monday that he was standing by the recommendations of the tax commission. These favored an income tax on "net incomes."

With the extra session entering its

OSCULATORY BRAND IS BAD ON HUBBIES

When Lips Are Free of Rouge

Paris, December 3.—Three throbbing, lingering kises in the dark from a beauteous French dancing girl is the magnet that is packing 'em in at a Paris revue theater.

The kissing queen mingles with the audience. Suddenly all the lights are turned out. Then she chooses some lucky stiff, enfolds him in a "Strangler" Lewis embrace and settles down to some scientific osculation. She slips away before the lights flash on amid a storm of envious males.

But every rose had its thorn. The kiss lottery went wrong one night. When the lights came on an enraged and portly lady stampled out of the theater, cursing the management and hauling after her a very embarrassed little husband.

DOHENY EXPECTS $100,000,000 GAIN ON DOME LEASES

Oil Operator on Stand, Says His Companies See Huge Profits From Investment.

Washington, December 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Failure to proceed with development of the national petroleum reserves would have cost the navy 225,000,000 barrels of oil through drainage and otherwise, Edward L. Doheny, veteran oil operator, today told the senate public lands committee.

Endorsing the leasing of the reserves being investigated by the committee, all of which are in the Teapot Dome field, Mr. Doheny said the "policy pursued under Secretary Daniels" resulted in the loss of at least 100,000,000 barrels. He recalled that he had warned the same committee in hearings six years ago of the danger of depletion of the reserves.

Senator Walsh, democrat, Montana, called attention to a report of the bureau of mines fixing the loss to the navy at 11,000,000 barrels, of which only 5,000,000 was said to have been sustained since the passage of the leasing act, and asked whether the bureau had the same information available to the witness.

Expects Big Profit.

"No, sir," said Mr. Doheny, "no man living has the same information on the subject that I have."

The Pan-American Petroleum company, of which he is head, already has $14,000,000 invested under its lease of reserves number one in California. Doheny declared, and was planning an immediate issue of $10,500,000 in bonds to finance drilling there during the next year and expected to expend up to $50,000,000 in a few years.

"What will you make in profit on the lease?" asked Senator Lenroot, republican, Wisconsin.

"We will have bad luck if we don't make $100,000,000."

Mr. Doheny explained, however, that this was a gross profit.

Under questioning by Chairman Smoot, the witness said he had contributed $75,000 to the last democratic

CHRISTMAS CLUB SAVINGS TO GIVE BUSINESS BOOST

$350,000 Will Be Poured Into Arteries of Trade in Atlanta in Next Twenty-three Days.

Distribution by local banks of more than $350,000, representing savings in Christmas clubs of several thousand Atlantans, is now under way and will give a decided impetus to holiday business, according to leading bankers and business men.

The distribution of Christmas savings, now under way which will be poured into the arteries of trade in Atlanta during the next twenty-three days, is just one of the factors presaging the greatest Christmas season ever enjoyed in Atlanta. At least, this is the opinion of Atlanta bankers, merchants and business men and, happily, an opinion which is shared by the general public.

Spirit Is Improving.

"We not only have more money than ever," W. V. Crowley, cashier of the Citizens and Southern bank said, "but we have that spirit of cheerfulness and steadiness that has not been quite so evident in many years."

Merchants have a greater variety of merchandise than ever, T. H. Latham, president of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, declared. The stocks have been selected with great care and with the demand of the buying public in mind at all times. The merchandise is better, more uniform and of greater quality than ever, buyers have taken advantage of the stable business conditions, the prospects of more money than in previous seasons, and have had confidence that the general improvement in conditions would express itself in an enormous Christmas trade. "And every indication confirms this preparation," he said.

"Cotton has had a great deal to do with this condition," said J. Hope Tigner, secretary of the Atlanta Commercial exchange. "The highest prices paid for cotton in years has added enormous sums to the usual amount in circulation, and despite the fact that Georgia's crop is the smallest in

Republican Insurgents Block Organization of House; Garrett Leads Gillett.

HOUSE RULE CHANGES MAY BRING COALITION

Minority Party in Accord With Insurgents on Demands; Gavel May Be Traded.

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

Washington, December 3.—Republican insurgents prevented the organization today of the sixty-eighth congress.

Hardly had the new house and senate convened at noon before the progressive group in the house made good its threat to block the election of a speaker. Four ballots were taken without result, and the house adjourned until noon tomorrow when republican organization leaders will renew their effort to reelect Speaker Gillett.

In contrast with the storm in the house was an uneventful 45 minutes' session of the senate. Although an organization fight there is in the background, there was no effort to force it today, and there were indications that it would be deferred at least until after President Coolidge has delivered his first annual message to congress.

The president can not deliver his message, however, until the house is organized, nor can the new congress function. Some leaders said that even the senate would be unable to transact any business other than that of receiving and acting upon nominations and treaties, which is solely a senate function.

Signs of Compromise.

While leaders of both the republican organization and the insurgents declared immediately after the close of today's session of the house that the fight would go on tomorrow, there were signs that a break might come before another overnight adjournment. The progressive bloc met tonight to canvass the situation and determine their further course.

Representative Longworth, the majority leader, declared that there would be no compromise with the insurgents as a group, but that organization leaders would treat with the individual members just the same as with any others of their party.

Representative Nelson, of Wisconsin, chairman of the progressive bloc, emphasized that the fight of his organization was not against Speaker Gillett as an individual but was being waged solely with the view to forcing the "old guard" leaders to give the house opportunity to amend its rules when a vote comes on their adoption which will be as soon as the speaker and other officers are selected.

Democrats May Land Gavel.

While declaring that the democrats in the house would give solid support to Representative Garrett, of Tennessee, for speaker, as they did on the four ballots today, some leaders of the minority party said that if the republican insurgents were seeking

Iowa Ford Club Hunts Coalition For Its Choice

Supporters of Manufacturer Fail To Turn Out in Force.

Des Moines, Iowa, December 3.—Iowa sponsors of Henry Ford for the presidency meeting here today indicated their efforts would be focused upon gaining the support of farmers and organized labor in the state.

By the permission of the cooperative legislative council of Iowa, an amalgamation of farmers union and organized labor representatives for political purposes, Francis G. Cutler, of Boone, Iowa, who called the convention of Ford supporters, went before the council to ask its indorsement of the Ford-for-president movement.

Only a handful of Ford boosters appeared for today's meeting but Mr. Cutler declared that Iowa is one of Mr. Ford's strongholds. He ascribed today's sparse attendance to inadequate advertisement of the meeting and to the fact that the farmers are too busy to get away from the fields.

SENATE TO GRIND THUNDER GRIST FOR CANDIDATES

Two Avowed and Two Potential Aspirants for Nomination Are Wearers of Toga.

BY THOMAS L. STOKES.

Washington, December 3.—Though it opened rather quietly and formally, with all discordant noises muffled in ceremony, the present senate of the United States, one of the moste noteworthy in the country's history, will serve during the next six hectic months as a grist mill for presidential politics.

It contains four presidential candidates, as a starter. The significant and outstanding individuality of these men—Underwood, Ralston and Copeland, democrats, and Hiram Johnson, progressive republican—coupled with other interesting personalities, belies the common theory lately much bandied about that the type of men sent to the senate by the people are inferior to those of the "good old days."

To Talk of Men.

Underwood and Johnson have already announced their candidacies. Ralston is commonly regarded as the favorite "dark horse," to be trotted into the ring when the democratic convention becomes deadlocked. Copeland is the center of a growing movement, which should at least place him in splendid position as a running mate for the democratic candidate.

In the hilarious talk-fest into which the senate will soon convert itself, these men will be the targets for their political opponents, and the pleasant topic for their party friends. At every opportunity, the political advantage will be seized, and talk of measures will drift into talk of men.

Other personalities will furnish cen-

ALDERMEN WILL PASS ON ACTION AT NEXT MEETING

Decision Is Reached To Postpone Delinquent Tax Advertising Until After First of Year.

OPEN HEARING VOTED ON TROLLEY PETITION

Increase in Firemen's and Policemen's Pay and Water Reduction Now Goes to Aldermen.

Salary increases for all policemen and firemen, water rate reduction, effective this month, delay in delinquent tax advertising until January and public hearing before a special committee on the street car company's petition were voted by city council Monday afternoon. Action on important routine business was delayed until Thursday afternoon when an adjourned session will be held.

Salary increases and water rate reduction both will have to receive approval from the aldermanic board Thursday afternoon and from Mayor Walter A. Sims before they become effective. Aldermen declared that the board will approve them by heavy majorities and administration leaders asserted that the mayor's approval is probable.

Predict New Raise.

Many councilmen declared that the water rate, raised from 80 cents to 81 early in the year and cut to its original amount by council Monday, will have to be raised again early in 1924 to meet a new emergency.

"We pledged the people to restore it to 80 cents before the end of the year," Alderman I. N. Ragsdale, chairman of the finance committee, said, "and regardless of what may develop in the future we are keeping faith with them."

December bills will be charged on the old basis of 80 cents.

Police and fire department salary increases went through practically without opposition. The salaries committee of council, through I. N. Ragsdale as vice chairman, introduced ordinances making increases averaging $20 per month for all privates in both departments to become effective January 1.

Privates in both departments will receive $1,620 a year for first year's service, instead of $1,380 as at present; $1,680 for second year, instead of $1,440 as now; $1,740 for third year, instead of $1,500, and $1,800 thereafter, instead of $1,560.

Raise Chief's Salary.

Chief of police was raised from $3,300 to $4,250; fire chief from $4,000 to $4,250; assistant police chief from $2,100 to $2,400; assistant fire chief to $2,640. Police sergeants were raised to the present pay of police captains, $1,920 per year, and police captains to $2,160.

Salary increase from $4,000 to $5,000 was voted to William A. Hansell, chief of construction, with only four negative votes out of 19 cast among 24 members of council. Alderman Ragsdale stated that Chief Hansell had agreed to refuse an offer of $6,000 from another state if his salary here were raised to $5,000. Moon, Etheridge, Couch and Cassells opposed the increase.

¶ Would you send a salesman out yesterday afternoon to remind the trade to be sure and come in and buy today?

¶ Why not tell them first thing this morning if you really want to get what's coming to you?

NEW YORK THUGS HOLD HIGH JINKS

BY THE ASSOCIATED PRESS.

New York, December 3.—New York's crime wave, which has ebbed and flowed for a month, today assumed more menacing proportions soon after the police announcement that criminal activities had subsided to such an extent that there was no longer need of extraordinary precautions.

Today's activities included four safe robberies, an attempted lynching, a daylight holdup and a street shooting. Also three gangsters were arrested charged with the theft of $16,000 worth of whisky. Seizure of 8,000 cases of Canadian beer, consigned to a Broadway hotel, was another event.

Meanwhile two judges appealed to new grand juries to cooperate with courts and the police in the speedy administration of justice in criminal cases.

Mystery of Phillipe Daudet

ROYALIST'S SON TOOL OR VICTIM OF REDS

Tangled in Web of Intrigue

Paris, December, 3.—Entry by Leon Daudet of formal charges of murder, by unknown persons, of his fourteen year old son Phillipe, promises to give Paris a thrill of excitment equal to the Dreyfus case.

Confirming the dead boy's letter, in which he said he was an anarchist, Georges Vidal, editor of the anarchist newspaper "Libertaire," said Monday that when Phillipe offered him his services in the cause of anarchism, the boy insisted on going to some police station and shooting a number of policemen, or else going to a cafe and shooting several dancers.

Vidal says Phillipe asked him which would be more useful to the anarchist cause. The editor believes the boy was insane.

Phillipe Daudet, son of the royalist leader and grandson of the writer, Alphonse Daudet, was found shot in a taxicab, after he had been missing from home for three days. He had been a visitor at the office of the anarchist newspaper, whose editors were bitter enemies of his father. Most dramatic of all, a letter from the royalist bred boy confessed that he was an anarchist.

Strange Hypotheses.

The police believe the case to be one of simple suicide. Daudet's supporters—the picturesque "Camelots Due Roi"—suggest strange possibilities of malicious influence and hypnotism.

Did anarchists get control of the plastic mind of the youth, urge him hypnotically to commit a political crime that would disgrace his royalist father, and finally influence him to suicide, to advance the anarchist cause?

These are the questions that have raised Parisian interest to fever pitch.

Some profess to believe that he went with the idea of spying on the anarchists. Daudet's friends admit they can see no good reason for his visit.

Scrap of Paper Found.

Daudet, in filing his charge, told the magistrate he thought Phillipe might possibly have consented to the anarchist's suggestion to commit a political crime, and that after he recovered his normal state committed suicide in remorse.

A scrap of paper in the boy's pockets bore the name of Real Delsarte, chief of the "Camelots du Roi," a royalist organization, and also the address of the Spanish embassy. The suggestion is advanced that he may either have been instructed to kill Delsarte, or attack the embassy.

The magistrate ordered the police to exhume the body Tuesday and an autopsy probably will be held Wednesday.

"No doubt the courts will prove that he was assassinated. The fact that he was kidnaped by the anarchists has already been practically admitted," Daudet said when the magistrate's decision was made.

Several Points Veiled.

Points which remain to be cleared up are why young Daudet was going in the opposite direction from his father's home when he died, how he spent the 700 francs he carried when he left home, and why he sold his overcoat and borrowed 35 francs from a stranger in a Montmartre cafe, frequented by anarchists.

The boy's letter to his mother, in which he confessed that he was an anarchist, is also a point of controversy. Daudet's friends claim that words were used in the letter which Phillipe normally never used, and say this bears out their belief that the letter was dictated to him. They admit that it is in his handwriting.

TWENTY INJURED IN TRAIN WRECK

Three Cars Turn Over on the Sylvania-Rocky Ford Line—Blaze Starts, But Is Extinguished.

Sylvester, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Twenty persons, mostly women and children, were injured late last night when a passenger coach, a freight car and a coal car turned over on an embankment on the Sylvania Central railway about two miles from here, while the train was making its return trip from Rocky Ford.

The passengers were severely shaken up, cut and bruised. The lamps in the car were overturned and started a blaze, but this was extinguished by two or three men, and all escaped without serious injury. Conductor T. W. Oliver was caught under a small safe in the baggage room, but was extricated. The engine was not derailed. The wreck was caused by a broken rail.

News Outside the Door.

Mr. and Mrs. Pine Siskin, olive-brown, flaxen or dusky streaked above, whitish and dusky streaks below, passing the winter south to the states on the gulf, probably do not know it, but this autumn their paradise among the northern pines has been subleased from Mother Nature by American cross-bills and white-winged crossbills. The famine induced by drought in the Canadian woodlands seems to have started these birds rather early on their southern trip.

American crossbills, males tile red, breed in mountains from Georgia northward to forests in northern New England and Canada. They inhabit coniferous woods where they eat the seeds, scattering cone scales on the ground. The music of their whistling as they go about in flocks is always pleasing.

The white-winged crossbill, nearing into Canada; males rosy red, wings and tail darkish, white cross-bars on wings, females, olive-brown, rump yellow, are rather undependable winter visitors, in the northern United States, sometimes appearing and often not seen. They start housekeeping early in the spring. Their queer crossed bills seem made for breaking cones.

comptroller, were held over until a later session. Mr. Taylor asked that a recommendation for an increase of $300 per year in his salary be dropped from the schedule submitted by the salary committee, declaring that he had rather have an increase in appropriations for his department applied to raise for his subordinates. Mr. West, at the session of the salary committee, had declined a recommendation for $1,000 raise, asserting that the city would not have enough money to raise everyone and that he did not want to jeopardize the chances of employee who needed money worse than he did.

Tax Advertising.

Council's action in ordering delinquent tax advertising held up until January was taken on a resolution by Alderman Jesse B. Armistead, who declared that many property owners are delinquent now from necessity but will be able to settle their accounts with the city by the first of the year.

"It would not be fair to submit these people to the embarrassment and the expense of having their property advertised for sale when the city can get just as much money by waiting until after the first of the year," Alderman Armistead said.

Alderman J. L. Carpenter's resolution to refund the fi fa charges to delinquents was not adopted.

Alderman Armistead launched an unsupported fight to file with disapproval the Georgia Railway & Power company's petition for elimination of jitneys from streets on which street cars operate, regulation of traffic, 10 cent cash fare and two cents transfer charge, revision of street car routes, elimination of unnecessary stops and relief from paving charges and gross receipts taxes.

The petition declared that the company failed by $565,000 in 1922, to earn eight per cent return on its minimum pre-war valuation and that steadily increasing losses would prevent any future extension of service and threatened the actual existence of the company.

Vote Open Hearing.

Only Alderman Armistead and Alderman Hunter voted in favor of the Armistead motion to refuse the petition without a hearing, while 28 members voted against it and carried by overwhelming majority a motion by Alderman J. R. Bachman to refer the petition to a special committee for study and public hearings.

Alderman R. P. Gordon, mayor pro tem, appointed Alderman Bachman, J. L. McLendon and Councilmen J. A. Beall, J. L. Wells, W. C. Jenkins as the special committee to consider the petition.

Alderman Armistead declared that the company's petition to council was "nothing more than a joke" and that it would not be binding on the street car company, whatever action council took. He recalled a petition submitted in 1901 when, he said, all traction interests asked to combine and then ignored unfavorable action by council.

Aldermen Bachman, Carpenter, Buchanan; Councilmen Greer, Cassells, York and others, urged that the company be given a hearing and that an effort be made to grant any concession that might be found to be in the public interest.

Alderman Bachman called attention to the company's offer to "try any fair plan" to improve its condition and give better service to the public.

Fair to the Public.

Councilman Greer declared that it would be only fair to the public and to the company to consider the petition with care. He said that the company's petition was based on actual losses on its real value and not on "watered stock." Its sincerity was attested, he said, by the offer to open its books to an audit by any reputable auditor designated by the city and to pay for the audit itself.

Councilman Cassels appealed to council for a "square deal" to the power company and condemned the popular attitude toward large corporations.

"Big corporations are made up of a lot of little people," he declared. "The only way big business can be done is for many little people to join their resources together and all public-service business has to be done on a big scale. We must consider interests of the little stock holders when we consider corporations and we must consider interests of the general public in all cases. If present conditions are hurting the power company to an extent that the stockholders will lose, or that service will be impaired, we want to know it, and, if necessary, change the conditions."

Councilman York declared himself in favor of regulation of street traffic, of reasonable revision in operating routes of the cars in the interest of better service, and of elimination of unnecessary stops. He declared himself unalterably opposed to increased fares and an additional transfer fee and to reducing paving charges and gross receipt taxes paid by the company. Jitneys should not be kept off streets served by street cars, he said, unless the people vote them off at the polls.

No date for the first session of the special committee was set Monday by Alderman Bachman. It will probably meet this week, he said.

New City Code.

Council adopted a request of the 1924 finance committee to provide funds for a new city code on resolution by Alderman W. B. Hartsfield who declared that the present code, published in 1910, is hopelessly antiquated.

"It is now against the laws of the city of Atlanta to throw rocks at gas street lights, to let beer kegs remain on sidewalks more than 24 hours and to do a great many other things that no one in Atlanta ever will have a chance to do," Alderman Hartsfield said. "On the other hand, the present code makes no mention of hundreds of important new city regulations adopted since 1910.

The city ordinance of 1910 prohibiting the showing of motion pictures of boxing matches was repealed on motion of Councilman Fred Woodall, of the police committee, seconded by Councilman J. J. Greer, author of the ordinance. It was adopted to prevent showing pictures of the Johnson-Jeffries prize fight in Atlanta and Councilman Greer declared himself willing to have it repealed since it has served its original purpose.

Made Non-Parking.

The west side of Madison avenue between Mitchell and Peters streets was made non-parking on motion of Councilman Pennington, who said that the opening of the Spring street viaduct December 20 would make it necessary to keep traffic moving as much as possible around the Terminal station plaza.

Betterment of the controversy over the filling station at the corner of North Jackson and Ponce de Leon avenues was deferred until next session of council because of the absence of Dr. C. J. Vaughn, councilman from the fourth ward, in which the station is located. Residents object to the curbing being lowered to enable it to operate. The Reed Oil company, Berry Collins and others concerned in building and leasing the place contend that it is located in the business zone and should be opened for service.

Widening of Peters street at a cost of $70,000 was recommended to the 1924 council in a resolution introduced by Alderman Ragsdale. No funds are available this year. The Peters street improvement, according to Alderman W. B. Duvall, will be necessary to give the west side and south side full benefit of the Spring street viaduct.

Repair of the city pipe organ at the auditorium at a cost of $3,000 also was recommended to the 1924 council.

Leach Voted Bonus.

J. R. Leach, employee in the construction department, was voted a bonus of $200 for raising $1,500 worth of corn on city land near the Peachtree disposal plant, where he is stationed. The corn was used for city prisoners and the fodder for city live stock.

A warm controversy developed over award of the contract for auditing the city's books in 1924. Dawson & Edison had been recommended by the finance committee last week but it was found that a lower bid from Morton & Bailey had been overlooked. The finance committee divided over the award, submitting a majority and a minority report.

General council finally voted to award the work to Dawson & Edison, but Councilmen York and Cooper held up the award on a motion to reconsider. Councilman York advocated asking new bids for the work, declaring that this action would insure a lower price than any submitted in the first set of bids. Final disposition of the audit contract will be made at the next regular session of council, December 17.

The buildings and grounds committee was authorized to make changes in the arrangement of the council chamber.

WALKER TO INSIST ON FULL PROGRAM

The Lankford income tax bill has been passed by both houses. The senate Tuesday refused to agree to house amendments, with one unimportant exception, to the measure. The next step will be for the lower branch to either recede from its amendments, in whole or in part, or without taking any action on the various measures proposing revenue collection machinery for the state, although the entire day had been devoted to debate on this subject.

The bills considered include the Ennis bill, which provides for creation of a revenue department, with a commissioner of revenues and six deputy commissioners, whose duties will be the collection of delinquent occupation, inheritance, motor vehicle license and other special taxes.

Substitute measures have been offered by Representative Milner, of Dodge, and by Representative Boswell, of Worth. Both substitutes differ from the Ennis bill in that, instead of creating a new revenue department, they place responsibility for collection of unpaid taxes upon the comptroller general, giving him authority to appoint six special deputies as collectors.

Fight on Substitute.

A large part of the differences which developed in the debate grew out of the charge that the substitute measures would take the entire motor vehicle department out of the hands of the secretary of state, although there has been absolutely no charge of inefficiency made against him. It is also said that to transfer this department to the comptroller general would result in greatly overburdening that office.

Representative Milner, speaking for his substitute measure, charged that as the result of failure to collect many auto licenses the secretary of state has virtually cost Georgia 28 per cent to collect these taxes. He referred to the percentage of growth in the number of registered motor vehicles in other states and said that Georgia's small figure in this respect showed that a large number of motor vehicles are not paying that tax although, he said, under the law of 1915, the secretary of state is authorized to appoint special inspectors to collect them.

Defends McLendon's Office.

Representative McMichael answered Mr. Milner, defending the administration of the law by Secretary of State S. Guyt McLendon and countering with the charge that the comptroller general's office did not collect the amount of ad valorem taxes that it should from railroads and other corporations.

Others who spoke in the course of the debate included Bussey, of Crisp; Penland, of Gilmer; Jones, of Floyd; Guess, of DeKalb; Griner, of Ben Hill; McClure, of Walker; Stewart, of Atkinson; Pafford, of Lanier; New, of Laurens; Rowe, of Richmond, and Langley, of Floyd.

At the morning session, the house overwhelmingly voted to table a resolution, introduced by Parks, of Terrell, and Burt, of Dougherty, setting 6 o'clock next Saturday night as the hour for adjournment sine die. A motion to limit all individual speeches, except those of the authors of bills under discussion or substitutes therefor, to ten minutes, was adopted in the interest of saving time.

VETERANS URGED TO REINSTATE THEIR POLICES

The United States Veterans' bureau is putting on a campaign to urge all ex-service men to reinstate their policies with the veterans' bureau, 439 Peachtree street. Sufficient time has elapsed, it is stated by those in charge of the campaign, to afford all who are eligible to embrace this opportunity for securing low cost and safe insurance.

In a circular letter sent out by the bureau it is pointed out that it has been found that young men are too indifferent as to the future and that they hardly realize that the day will come when their earning power will fail, while a substantial insurance policy easily acquired in early life may stand them in good stead against want and dependency.

M. Bryson, district manager of the bureau, suggests that a converted government insurance policy may make an ideal Christmas present.

paid the yeggmen something over $24,000 were particularly daring. One of the city's busiest spots, the Pennsylvania Railroad terminal, was the scene of one. Thieves ripped off a safe door in the offices of the Union company and made off with $3,300.

Equally daring was a safe robbery on a busy Bronx corner. Three unmasked armed men walked into the apartment of Max Kraysler, a jeweler, bound and gagged a maid, drilled the safe and made off with $6,000 in currency and several hundred dollars in gold.

Jewelry worth more than $10,000 was taken in a raid on the safe of R. R. Fogel, a lower Broadway jeweler. The safe crackers entered the place by cutting a hole in the floor above.

Early today cracksmen opened the safe of the William Baumann Department store in the Bronx and took $5,000.

Pedestrian Shot.

A mob of 200 attempted to lynch Edward Edmond, a street cleaner, when a policeman captured him on a Brooklyn street after he had struck down a fellow street cleaner, Philip German, who later died. The policemen kept the menacing crowd from his prisoner with a drawn pistol. A police riot squad effected the rescue.

Thomas A. Connors was shot in the jaw as he walked down Broadway in Long Island City. He did not know his assailant, who fired from across the street.

Two unmasked youths detached themselves from the crowd passing Max Goldberg's Brooklyn drug store, walked in with leveled guns, took $140, and walked out. The Manhattan police took Owney Madden, notorious Hell's Kitchen gang leader, and two of his pals to jail as perpetrators of a $16,000 whisky robbery yesterday. Madden was released from Sing Sing prison less than a year ago after a seven-year term for manslaughter. He was alleged to have instigated the murder of a rival gangster.

The Elgin Time Observatory takes the time from the stars and transmits it to the Elgin Laboratories and Timing Rooms. It is the only observatory operated by a watch company in practical time taking service every day.

The "Streamline" Elgin in 20-year Gold-filled Case, Plain or Engraved, $35

Three Historic Trends in Watches

1. In the early days the master watchmakers were located in Europe. The art was new—watches were luxuries—precision within small compass was an unsolved problem.
2. American manufacturers found that quantity machinery could be used in watchmaking, and began to turn out watches on a commercial scale.
3. Elgin established watchmaking in the professional spirit, lifting it out of the commercial rut. Elgin developed the famous "B. W. Raymond" Railroad Watch (see lower left hand column). Elgin erected its own Time Observatory in absolute charge of a well-known astronomer. Elgin built up the finest service through jewelers ever known, so that Elgin users might have the most intelligent, fair-priced and prompt care of their watches right in their own home town.

Elgin established and endowed the Elgin Watchmakers' College as a contribution to watchmaking science for the good of everybody.

BANE OF NATION BARED IN SPEECH

New York, December 3.—False social ideals are hampering industry and the dominance of the lawyer is hampering political development in this country, John L. Harrington, of Kansas City, Mo., president of the American Society of Mechanical Engineers, told that body tonight:

"Our country," he said, "is still governed by the military and the legal professions, influenced somewhat by the business man. The lawyer not only occupies his peculiar field, the judiciary, but dominates in the legislatures and in the executive branches of the government.

"These facts have materially retarded the progress of political development for the lawyer lives by precedent. His eyes are always on the past. It results that we progress slowly, that order and rule are deemed more important than service and progress. The engineer with his constructive, creative scientific mind is sorely needed."

Mr. Harrington declared the present social code and education system made women look down on men who worked with their hands and barred native Americans of superior cultural education from the profitable and honorable fields of industry which involved manual labor.

It was the obligation of the engineer, he said, to attempt to change the present system. America, he added, must look to the engineer to allay unrest among the nation's workers and to remedy unscientific business methods.

S. C. Porter Named President Of Atlanta Auto Association

S. C. Porter, of the Porter-Minehan company, was elected president of the Atlanta Automobile association for the coming year at the business meeting which preceded the annual banquet of the organization held Monday night at the Capital City club. Reports of the past year's work were made which indicated that the organization had progressed along all lines and will begin 1924 with the brightest prospects in the history of the association.

Other officers named were, J. H. Sommers, of the Packard Enterprises, Inc., first vice president; W. R. C. Smith, of the Southern Automotive Dealer, second vice president; C. W. Dobbs, of the Dobbs Tire Repair company, third vice president; J. M. Cochran, of the Eveready Battery company, fourth vice president; T. K. Johnson, of the General Motors Truck company, reelected secretary, and Ralph Parker, of the Cadillac company, reelected treasurer.

Directors Are Named.

The following directors were elected: H. M. Craig, of the Olds Motor works; D. T. Bussey, of the David T. Bussey company, from the automobile division, and Lon Credelle, of the Lon Credelle company, and Ed Baughman, of the Ozburn-Abston company, from the accessory division.

F. W. Northcutt, retiring president, was presented with a set of silver goblets in appreciation of his services to the association during the past year.

J. E. Smith, who presented the gift, paid a fine tribute to Mr. Northcutt's untiring efforts and declared that he was "an honor to the business and to the association." The association had made wonderful progress under Mr. Northcutt's administration, he said, due to his leadership.

Mr. Northcutt replied with a short speech in which he expressed his appreciation of the cooperation of all the members of the organization. Mr. Smith was introduced as the oldest past-president of the association.

Fred G. Tegler, retiring third vice president, was presented with a gold watch in topen of his services for the organization. E. Y. Yancey, who made the presentation, complimented Mr. Tegler highly.

Other members who were honored were A. S. Campbell and W. L. Mathers. Mr. Campbell was presented with a certificate, setting forth the important work that he has done for the association. He secured 24 new members during the past year. Mr. Mathers was presented with a life membership in the organization for his work in protecting interests of the association against legislation that would work to the detriment of automobile owners and dealers.

The retiring officers were each thanked for their work and bright predictions were made for 1924.

Mr. Northcutt's report of the work of the past year, which was read by C. V. Hohenstein, executive secretary, recounted the high success of the association's undertakings, including that of the Southern Automobile show, which was held last February; safety and traffic regulation work, trade meetings and other work to improve the interests of the trade.

Progress Is Shown.

Mr. Hohenstein, executive secretary, submitted his annual report, which showed that the membership had been greatly increased and a better spirit of cooperation among the members secured.

Sam Porter, chairmen of the committee for the 1924 automobile show, reported that work was well under way for the event.

It was announced that a meeting will be held at 8 o'clock Monday night at the chamber of commerce to vote on establishment of a motor mart in Atlanta, whereby dealers would cooperate in selling used cars.

The membership indorsed the idea of a joint advertising campaign to boost the selling of accessories during the Christmas season. If a sufficient amount is subscribed, the advertising campaign will be undertaken.

The associated voted to send flowers to J. W. Goldsmith, Jr., a member who is ill in a local hospital.

SENATE TO GRIND THUNDER GRIST

ters for storms over issues which must be met in the presidential conventions. Mayfield, of Texas, comes to the senate with the specter of the Ku Klux Klan trailing very visibly behind him—so visibly that it cannot be disregarded. The klan is perhaps the most feared subject now entering presidential war councils behind closed doors. An attempt will be made to oust Mayfield, and the resulting fight is expected to be more bitter and more politically significant than the row over the Michigan senator.

But with the bludgeon hanging over his head, Mayfield sat quietly through the brief opening ceremony in the senate Monday, and when he returned to his seat after taking his oath, wrote a telegram of congratulations to his son, now at the University of Texas, on his nineteenth birthday.

La Follette Absent.

La Follette, vigorous leader of both senate and house progressives, will have much to say that will be considered by platform makers. He has the reputation of being an "advanced" plank maker—nearly every one of the planks he has urged in party conventions in years past has gradually worked its way into the regular republican platform. He was absent Monday on account of sickness, and may be for several days.

His outcries against the existing order will be seconded ably by his followers, the unique Magnus Johnson, with his megaphone voice; the plain-spoken Brookhart, and the persistent Norris, of Nebraska. They will spike the regulars' guns frequently, and will be enthusiastically aided by the democrats.

Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, minority leader, will direct the democratic fire at the administration, and his two able lieutenants, Pat Harrison, of Mississippi, and Caraway, of Arkansas, with reputations as troublemkers, will turn the senatorial discussion into political channels.

Democrats Choose Program.

Robinson is already formulating his tactics. Conscious of the republican split which will prevent almost any legislation, he announced a program of measures the democrats will foster.

A material reduction in taxes; retrenchment in public expenditure; study of the railway situation with a view to lower freight rates, and farm relief are included. He also announced that the democrats would consider all proposals for adjustment of international peace without partisanship.

But behind the scenes, in quiet councils of war, the democrats are giving more study to such matters as the recent investigation of the veterans' bureau, which turned up much testimony not beneficial to the republican administration, and the Teapot Dome investigation which has recently entered a new phase. They will also enjoy the republican differences on the world court.

CRAIG GOT DESERTS, BUT GOES FREE

accept the remission. He has been represented by those most active in his behalf here as having declared he would accept only a full and unconditional pardon and, failing to receive it, would insist on serving the sixty days in the Essex county, New Jersey, jail, to which he was sentenced by Judge Mayer in February 1921.

Action Is Final.

Administration officials to whose attention this matter was called said that the action of the president was final and that so far as the federal government was concerned Mr. Craig could take the remission of sentence or nothing.

Mr. Daugherty, in his report to the president, reviewed the case in detail from its origin, setting forth how Craig, after Judge Mayer had denied his application for appointment as co-receiver in the liquidation of the affairs of the Brooklyn Rapid Transit company, wrote a letter to Lewis Nixon, New York public service commissioner, in which he declared the judge had denied the city of New York access to information and had refused to put the city on an equal footing with the private interests active in the receivership. Publication of this letter resulted in the contempt proceedings.

The course pursued by Craig in taking the case into the higher courts was arraigned by Mr. Daugherty, who said that the comptroller and his counsel, instead of taking the "plain course" of appeal, "sought to avoid a review on the merits" by submitting the case on petition for a writ of habeas corpus. Pointing out that Craig once before had been adjudged guilty of contempt, Mr. Daugherty said:

Craig No Novice.

"Craig therefore is no novice in the matter of contempts. He is a lawyer and it can not be fairly thought that when he resorted to habeas corpus proceedings in the present instance he did not know that he was thereby preventing any possible review of his case on its merits . . . It was not the fault of our judicial system that his case was not reviewed by an entirely different tribunal, in fact by two such tribunals, but because he deliberately placed himself in a position whereby no possibility could his case be thus reviewed. If there have been technicalities, it it because he raised them and sought to escape under them."

In giving his opinion on the matter of clemency, the attorney general held the case to be one of criminal contempt and as such was within the pardon power of the president. The arguments presented in favor of a pardon by the board of apportionment and estimate, Mr. Daugherty said, were however, "as unfounded and misleading as was the false, malicious and libellous attack of the defendant upon the court.

Act of Moral Turpitude.

"The publication of falsehood, calculated and intended to reflect upon the honor and integrity of a court and which, although known to be false, the contemner declines to retract but reiterates, is an act involving moral turpitude," he added. "In such an attitude no question is presented of legitimate criticism of a court. No person claims that a court is exempt from proper criticism. Proper criticism, however, means honest, truthful criticism and no thinking person will claim that such freedom of utterance carries with it the right of criminal libel, to falsify, defame and circulate false, malicious and untruthful statements reflecting upon the rectitude of a court in a matter pending before it, which must tend to destroy its usefulness and bring into disrepute and contempt our judicial system. Such was the offense of Craig in which he persists."

MISTAH SPEAKAH

By Ralph T. Jones

Mistah Speakah—

Move we table all motions to adjourn sine die—

In the interests of conservation of time.

Some of the members from the more rural counties admit that the metropolitan atmosphere of Atlanta astonishes them. One, however, said that city efficiency had reached the highest peak yet when he read an advertising sign on Peachtree as follows: "Boys and golf pants made to order." "I suppose after you have a pair of golf pants and a coupla' boys made, you wear the pants and use the boys as caddies," he commented.

Representative Penland, of Gilmer county, made his maiden speech on the floor of the house Monday. It was during debate on the various revenue collection bills and was listened to with close attention. It proved worthy of general attention, at that, being a thoughtful, intelligent commentary upon the subject. Which is more than can be said for some speeches made in the same place. Not mentioning any means, at that.

Some day, just for fun, this column is going to keep tab on the number of speeches made in the house which begin about like this—"Mr. Speaker, I had not intended to speak on this question. However—." Bet two-thirds of 'em start that way, or words to that effect.

Whereas, if they would only live up to first intentions, how much time, how much worry, how much weariness would we save? No fair?

Mistah Speakah—

Move this house do now adjourn—

The clerk will read the notices on the desk—

AMBASSADOR SENT TO INVITE FORMER KENTUCKIANS HOME

Bearing a commission as "home coming ambassador" from the city of Louisville and the state of Kentucky, William A. Harris, president of the southern division of the Kokomo Rubber company, will be a visitor in Atlanta today with instructions to acquaint all former Kentuckians and descendants of Kentuckians with plans for Kentucky's 1924 home coming and to extend an invitation to them all to make the pilgrimage "home" next June.

After visiting the mayor and county authorities, Mr. Harris will make a particular effort to obtain the consent of a leading former Kentuckian here to represent the Kentucky organization in all matters that relates to that state's "house pary."

According to the latest census figures there are nearly 2,000 former Kentuckians residing in Atlanta and that many more residing in other parts of Georgia. Altogether there are more than 800,000 native Kentuckians residing outside of their home state. Kentucky expects to entertain not less than 100,000 visitors next June as its first home coming in 1906 brought more than 40,000 former Kentuckians back home for a fortnight's visit.

Arcade Cooperative Association Members Will Meet Tonight

The final 1923 membership meeting of the Arcade Cooperative association, made up of tenants of the Arcade building, who are affiliated with the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, will be held tonight on the third floor of the arcade. Practically no business will be transacted, but the entire session will be given up to entertainment and good-fellowship. The special entertainment committee, of which C. E. Harrison is chairman, has arranged a number of interesting features for the evening both vocal and instrumental.

President G. C. Green will probably deliver a brief report, referring to some of the outstanding accomplishments of the association during 1923, principal among which has been the establishment of the "Trade On The Arcade Guarantee Plan," whereby the association and the members of it stand back of every purchase made by the shopping public from a member of the association. Everyone purchasing merchandise from members of the association, is guaranteed satisfaction or money refunded, and any complaint is immediately investigated and adjusted to the satisfaction of the purchaser.

MORE RAIN TODAY WITH NO CHANGES IN TEMPERATURE

More rain today with continued moderate temperature was predicted by the local weather office Monday, as the probable state of the weather. A blanket of cloud, it was indicated, would continue to hold to earth the warmth of the last week-end's sunshine for the early part of this week. No more real winter weather is in prospect before Thursday.

The entire cotton belt is being sprinkled liberally with showers this week, according to reports received at the local weather office, and temperatures are unusually high all over the country.

LAST SERVICES HELD FOR WILLIAM YEANDLE

Funeral services for William Henry Yeandle, former Atlantan, who died Friday at Washington, D. C., were held in Atlanta Monday morning at St. Philip's cathedral. Dean Thomas H. Johnston officiated. Burial was at Westview.

Mr. Yeandle lived in Atlanta for about 40 years. Six years ago he moved to Washington, where he lived with his son, Stephen S. Yeandle. He is survived by another son, W. H. Yeandle, Jr., of Torreon, Mexico.

Thrilling Stunts Will Be Staged On Building Roof

An exhibition of thrilling stunts on the roof of the American Savings bank on Peachtree street will be offered by Daredevil Johnny Reynolds, who is appearing in an act at Keith's Forsyth this week, and has been arranged for the noon hour today, according to M. L. Semon, manager of the Forsyth.

Reynolds, who lays claim to originating the human fly stunt by climbing to the top of a skyscraper in New York several years ago, will perform a number of feats equally as daring and hair raising. In his act at the Forsyth, one of the stunts offered requires the steadiest of nerves, one little slip causing him serious injury or worse.

Owing to refusal of local building owners in allowing him to climb to the top, Reynolds plans to substitute a number of stunts that require the same steadiness of nerve as the former.

FRAME WILL SPEAK ON U. S. RAILROADS

Professor Hugh Campbell Frame, of Emory university, will address the Atlanta sector of the Association of the Army of the United States at the monthly dinner meeting at 6:30 o'clock tonight at assembly hall No. 1 in the chamber of commerce building. Professor Frame, who has made an extensive study of railroad systems, will speak on "The American Railroads, Past and Present." Plates for the dinner will be 75 cents each. The sector now meets only once a month.

MRS. STRAUGHN DIES AT HOME OF DAUGHTER

News was received in Atlanta Monday of the death of Mrs. William Straughn, a former resident of this city, whose death occurred on Thursday, October 29, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. George Drach in Ludington, Mich.

Mrs. Straughn made her home in Atlanta for many years, and left here three years ago to live with Mrs. Drach, who was formerly Miss Neva Straughn. She had a wide circle of friends who held her in high esteem and by whom she was greatly beloved. She was a member of All-Saints' church.

Mrs. Straughn had been ill for several months, following a stroke of apoplexy and her death was not unexpected. Her funeral and burial took place at Ludington, from the residence of Mrs. Drach.

CURSE OR BLESSING, Which? He that withholdeth corn, the people shall curse him; but blessing shall be upon the head of him that selleth it.—Proverbs 11:26.

SQUARE DEAL ASKED.

Senator William J. Harris, of Georgia, has announced that he will vigorously fight any proposal to cut the tariff rates on peanuts and vegetable oils.

Congressman Charles R. Crisp, of Georgia, a member of the ways and means committee, has announced he will seek to put calcium arsenate on the free list.

Congressman Carl Vinson, of Georgia, has asked the president to declare calcium arsenate duty free, which the president has a right to do under the Fordney-McCumber bill.

The southern tariff congress, a non-partisan organization of business men, manufacturers, bankers, farmers and professional men, and headed by John H. Kirby, a democrat, of Texas, is preparing to hold in Chattanooga perhaps the most important convention in its history looking to carrying out its slogan, "Protect the south, it matters not who writes the tariff law," the purpose of this congress being the protection of those southern commodities, vegetable oils, peanuts, citrus fruits, etc., that will suffer, it is claimed, under import competition.

These activities make to the layman an interesting study. The south is the heart of the democratic policy of tariff for revenue only, and yet there are many men in the south who believe that a high duty is necessary on many articles in order to properly safeguard southern production.

There is nothing paradoxical about the situation, as the democratic policy of tariff for revenue and the republican policy of protection only represent in general the outstanding principles as they affect the wide range of tariff schedules. And it is entirely consistent with these principles for the republican tariff to carry a "free list," as it does, and for a democratic tariff to carry a "protected list," as it always has. The fact is there is not and cannot be any fine uniformity or consistency in tariff schedules. Different commodities, and articles of trade, carry different rates, and the southern view, irrespective of party faiths, is that those products of the south that would be destroyed through free duty importations should be protected, and that certain products of northern and western mills and fields should also be protected, but that the general proposition of a high tariff on necessities in food and clothing, which must be borne by the masses, is economically wrong. And the position is consistent and tenable.

The framing of a tariff is the framing of a guide for business, as well as a legal passport to do business, and a proper safeguard for the consumers. There are different conditions, at home and abroad, that demand different rates, just as there are differentials in freight rates due to distinctive conditions.

In the matter of vegetable oils, the Asiatic coolie labor raises soy beans, peanuts and other oil producing vegetables cheaper, by reason of the abundance and cheapness of labor, than they can be raised in the south. To import these raw peanuts, or the oils, duty free, or even on a negligible duty, simply means the destruction of some of the leading money crops in the south. Peanuts, for instance, have been the salvation of the Georgia farmer since the invasion of the boll weevil, and if Manchurian peanuts should be imported free the prices of the Georgia grown peanut would drop to less than the cost of production under Georgia's labor conditions. The cotton seed, from which oils are made, used in the manufacture of lards, would experience the same precipitate loss in prices.

And yet a duty on these articles does not mean higher prices for consumptive necessities, nor does it abrogate or abridge the democratic policy of tariff for revenue only.

We want a square deal for the south regardless of whether the tariff law is written by republicans or democrats, and the law of tariff, written and in practice, is so wide that this can be secured, but only through a broad and liberal policy. Narrow and bigoted political misconceptions of party tenets cannot get it.

THE 68TH CONGRESS.

The sixty-eighth congress began business Monday with Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, still leading a bare republican majority in the upper house, and with Senator Joe Robinson, of Arkansas, the floor leader for the democrats.

In the house the bare old line republican majority is menaced by a progressive bloc holding the balance of power, and demanding a change in the sixty-seventh congressional rules as to committee assignments, and other concessions as to caucuses and parliamentary procedure.

The result is Gillette, of Massachusetts, speaker during the last congress and old guard candidate for speaker again, actually trailed the democratic caucus nominee, Garrett, of Tennessee, during several ballots in the afternoon fight for organization.

In the meantime Representative Longworth, a son-in-law of the late Theodore Roosevelt, has taken up the reins of floor leadership for the republicans, being a compromise candidate on which the old guard and progressive wings finally centered in the presession caucuses.

The situation accentuates the bitter factional split in the republican ranks, and recalls many of the scenes incident to the Roosevelt-Taft split in 1912.

The democrats are united to a man, without any insurgency tendencies; the republicans are playing politics in all factions with the results far from tranquil as to old guard strength in 1924.

The situation is unique, and is being watched with as much humor as concern by the nation.

SENATE ACTED WISELY.

The senate is to be commended for its prompt and decisive action in failing to concur in the house income tax bill, as passed on the eve of Thanksgiving under the misnomer of the Lankford bill.

The bill in question, providing that a tax of 5 per cent may, at the option of recurring legislatures, be imposed upon the gross earnings of individuals and businesses, would not only shut the door of Georgia to further investments, and possibly penalize the businesses of every firm in the state, but it would leave the way open to tax every dollar received for farm production, even to the eggs marketed by the housewife.

As the situation stands the house will probably now ask for a conference, to which the senate will agree, and a new compromise conference bill will, in the course of a few days, come before both houses for passage by the usual constitutional majorities.

It is hoped and believed that united and harmonious action may result for necessary tax revision, but only along constructive, and certainly not destructive, lines.

The latest drive is for the benefit of Christmas.

There were enough Thanksgiving turkeys to "coop" some up for Christmas week.

Think of the homes that are happy without Thanksgiving or Christmas turkey, and remember the homes that have neither.

At least, Canada repudiates the labels on the booze that gets over the border.

Thanksgiving turkey hash and soup as hold-overs till Christmas.

"Indian summer," wrote a school boy, "is mighty near all that's left of the Indians."

Hugo Stinnes made his mark by trading in the mark.

It's no news to hear that "Germany is preparing for war," for she's been fighting-mad ever since the armistice.

The don't-worry clubs have suspended until the Christmas bills are coming in.

Shop early, and as often as the money will permit.

Little Christmas Children.

I.

Little Christmas Children,
Snug and warm in bed,
Still they hear the runnin'
Of the reindeer on the shed;
And they believe in Santa Claus,
Just like they did of old,
And all the Christmas stories
The world's sweet mothers told.

II.

Little Christmas Children,
When holidays are near
They gather at the home-fire
And see dream-pictures there;
The fairies come to see them
In chariots of gold.
And they believe in Santa Claus
Like little folks of old.

Life in Lumpkin.

(From The Dahlonega Nugget)

Why is it that chickens crow more at night along about Christmas than any other time? We never attended college nor studied roosterology is why we ask this question.

Our better half had five or six hundred pounds of pork butchered last Saturday. Since, before and after sitting down eating backbone, spare ribs and sausage we sing, "Home, Sweet Home."

For the first time the Georgia legislature and the North Georgia conference were in session in the same city at the same time, but none of the many prayers delivered by this great body of good men had any effect upon the members in the way of causing them to have mercy enough on the tax payers to disband.

A lady told us the other day that when a screech owl came around she put an iron in the fire and the bird left. One came around Saturday morning at at 3:30 and started its music near our office, maybe thinking it would take advantage of our neighbor while she was dreaming. But the little owl soon ceased its music and flew away. It either got the scent of our hot stove or our old yarn socks we had on while warming our feet.

In Winter's Blue.

I.

Do not despond if in blue skies
Grey shadows may come creeping,
If moon and little dancing stars
Within their shrouds are sleeping—
If wild winds threat of sleet and snow,
Wild hares from coverts peeping.

II.

Bright mistletoe and hollies red
Adorn the leafless trees;
Like sentinels tall cedars stand
Unruffled by the breeze—
Enchanting days, enchanting nights
Still make their melodies!

III.

Each cloud its "silver lining" has,
And Yule-tide's drawing near!
In Winter's blue the stars will dance,
The moon shines crystal-clear,
And hearts glow bright with happiness,
With love, good will and cheer!

A Sermon on the Outside.

"Our opinion," says Editor Townsend, "is that Sunday religion alone will be no help towards getting a seat in heaven. Admitting that a person was given credit for it and got to be with St. Peter one day in the week, and had to be with the devil the balance of the six, the one day's pleasure would seem slow in coming around. Be kinder like it was for a boy away back when people had biscuit only once a week—Sunday morning."

Message to the Sun.

Come out, Mister Bright Sun,
And shine the rain away;
It isn't long till Christmas,
And the children count each day.
Make the weather wear a smile,
As though it dreamed of May!

Real "Leading" Question.

"One of the earnest seekers
After the eternal verities
Wants to know
If there is any real happiness;
Which forces from ye pastor
The regretful admission
That while some of this
Raw 1923 stuff
Has a powerful kick,
It has no real staying power."

It Won't Work.

(From Siloam Springs Herald-Democrat.)

In the "Fool Column" last week we made this remark: "Smile, pass it on. If the fellow you smile at won't return it, crack him on the jaw." We just want to say that is fool advice. Don't do it. We tried it Saturday and it won't work.

Dangers of House Tax Bill "Real and Not Imaginary" Says Charters, of Hall

Editor Constitution: I am writing to commend the editorial recently published in The Constitution attacking the income tax bill as it was amended and passed by the house.

It was refreshing to read the strong reasoning so ably presented in this editorial.

The dangers pointed out are real and not imaginary, and I am certainly hopeful that the editorial may bring the legislature to a sensible consideration of this important question.

W. A. CHARTERS.

Gainesville, Ga., December 3, 1923.

HOUSTON WILL VOTE ON ABOLISHING COURT

Perry, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) A special election will be held in Houston county Wednesday for the ratification or rejection of an act passed at the recent session of the legislature to abolish the city court of Houston county. In the event the court is abolished by the vote cast, another act passed by the same legislature, providing for four terms a year of the superior court, will become effective January 1, and all cases, both civil and criminal, remaining in the city court will be transferred to the superior court for trial.

The grand jury at the October term, 1922, of the superior court, composed of twenty-three representative men from all sections of the county, after a thorough examination into the workings and expenses of the city court, recommended "that our present representative" at the next session of the legislature have enacted an act abolishing the city court of Houston county. The present board of county commissioners also recommended that the court be abolished.

Just In Passing

BY JAMES A. HOLLOMON

Well done, good and faithful servants of the people!

The senate of Georgia, with record-breaking speed and a decisive vote, undid in two minutes Monday what it took the house 23 days to unwittingly accomplish for the destruction of the state through the estoppage of development and the blocking of progress.

The senate, without ceremony or debate, and without temporizing or qualifying, killed the house income tax bill, which it passed in the shades of Thanksgiving eve, and which proposed not only to throw the basic tax system of Georgia into the boiling pot of legislative politics, but invited a 5 per cent tax upon every income in the state, even to the price of a dozen eggs that the farmer's wife might slip into a pin-money fund for Santa Claus.

Well done, senate! Thrice well done!

There is no middle ground between right and wrong. A thing is either one or the other.

There is no middle ground between fairness and unfairness. A thing can't be both.

Any income tax measure that would leave it discretionary with each yearly legislature, by a majority of a quorum, to change the spirit of the existing constitution of Georgia, and to change rates, exemptions, classes and, most of all, the imposition of levies upon "gross" or "net" incomes, as it might will, would be basicly wrong, and in that fact it can not and could not be justified through any hope or belief that it might some day be made right.

The constitution is a sacred document. It is a grave responsibility that one assumes in changing it.

Graver still when one seeks to strike from it the safeguards to the interests of the people that it so wisely has established.

The legislature is a representative body. It is composed today of scores of as good citizens as there are in the state. It will be thus the next session, and the next, and the next—

But the legislature's own action—that is the house's own action—in passing such a bill as that defeated by the senate Monday, is evidence sufficient that it is dangerous—critically dangerous—to trust the framing from year to year of any organic tax system to—and only to—legislatures.

Scores of men voted for the bill Tuesday night who are opposed to it today—and in reality were opposed to it then.

They wanted something to happen, and something did happen.

The people are watching, believe me!

The possibility of taxing gross incomes! Why, my friends, there isn't a farmer in the state, however hard may have been his lines for the past few years, and however distressing may be his condition today, who would not pay more taxes by a 5 per cent levy upon his gross income, from the chickens and eggs and pigs and cream and peanuts and so on, than he pays today in all of his local and state taxes—

And yet we talk of giving relief to those upon whom the tax burden falls heaviest!

Let's be true to our principles, and true to the material interests of all the people of this great state.

We need tax revision. But it must be constructive tax revision, and not destructive.

I am confident the members will act more wisely in the next vote. They mean well.

It simply doesn't pay to take too much for granted, or to act too impulsively.

What we need in Georgia is the stabilization of the basic system of taxation, and that can only be done by writing the system in the constitution, stipulating not only the rate limitation, but that income levies shall be on "net" only, and stipulating also the exemptions.

Double taxation should be avoided at least by crediting the ad valorem against the income, or property paying an ad valorem.

Something else, any scientific income tax law should provide exemptions, graduations, and even classifications of properties.

It ought to be uniformly fair to the producer, who by his labor adds to the material welfare of the country, and to the consumer, who by his labor creates the actual wealth of the country.

Now—

Let's try it over in conference and see if a good and satisfactory bill cannot be evolved.

In the meantime watch out for this—

There is a movement on foot to have the house rules committee place for passage a statutory income tax bill—

Swat it as you would a wasp!

Think of Georgia having in her constitution a 5-mill limit ad valorem tax for state purposes, and in her statutes an income tax for state purposes!

Whither are we drifting?

Ellis, of Tift, is one of the best men in the assembly. He was a member of the governor's tax commission. He was a signatoire of the commission's report.

Why has my friend Ellis drifted off now to a statutory income tax bill—another basic tax measure to swing with the moving, restless pendulum of state and legislative politics?

Friends, why do we trifle with the constitution of Georgia in such a way as this?

Is it simply a scrap of paper to be nullified at will by a majority of a quorum vote of the general assembly?

Why not submit a just and fair and definite tax revision as a constitutional amendment, and go home and defend it before the people?

BITS OF NEW YORK LIFE

BY O. O. M'INTYRE

On the Mexican Border, December 3.—We were up early today to cross the Rio Grande to Bill's ranch in Mexico. My knowledge of the Rio Grande comes mostly from popular songs. I visualized it as a beautiful, wide, clear, silvery stream. It is more like a small muddy creek at Del Rio.

The ferries are small flat barges holding about four autos. They are propelled by the current. The ferry is attached by pully to a rope spanning the stream and sidewise the current carries it over—a slow, cumbersome process.

Weatherbeaten Mexicans man the ferry. There is typical Texas etiquette at the ferry, that New York motorists might well emulate. The first at the ferry is never jockeyed out of position. It is a law dangerous to violate unless one is quick on the draw.

The custom inspection on either side of the river is casual. The Mexican boatmen sing at their work. Like all Mexicans they have a bland and childlike simplicity. They smile at you shyly. I tried to talk to one and he stumbled back of the auto like a frightened child.

Across from Del Rio is Villa Acuna—at one time reputed to be the worst town on the Mexican border. And it has lost little of its wickedness. It is known on the Texas side as "The Hooch Hounds' Paradise." It is made up mostly of saloons and gambling houses and Mexican bagnios.

In Del Rio they tell a story typical of the wickedness of Villa Acuna. A hard boiled hombre drove up in front of the leading drug store carrying a wildcat under each arm. He stepped up to the prescription case and ordered a glass of carbolic acid. After it was served he took a half dozen bichloride of mercury tablets and dropped them into the glass. Then he stirred it with the end of his six shooter and swallowed it at a gulp.

"Where are you from?" inquired the Del Rio drug clerk.

"I come from Villa Acuna," was the reply, "but it got so rough over there us jelly-beans had to get out."

As we neared the middle of the Rio Grande, Raymond Dickson remarked that we were now out of the United States. I don't know how other travelers feel but the sudden realization that I'm off my native soil gives me a sinking tinge of homesickness. I would have been willing and glad to have turned back. I don't globe-trot well.

On the Villa Acuna banks were pack mules and burros piled high with fire wood. There was also a garrison of Mexican soldiers with their wives lounging about in the yard. Wives of Mexican soldiers are camp followers—following them even in battle. Cleanliness is lacking.

Up the bank a short distance a typical cow-puncher was climbing a tall pole. He was swinging about in a death defying manner and giving vent to an ear piercing "Yip-ee-ee!" One of the ferry passengers explained it succinctly with, "Squirrel whiskey."

In a side creek running into the Rio Grande the bank on either side was lined with Mexican women doing their family washing on big flat stones. They come from miles around to do the weekly wash. The burros were grazing in the background.

About the first thing that greets the eye as one mounts the hill at Villa Acuna is "The First Chance Saloon." A banner outside reads:

Come all ye pilgrims from foreign lands,
To the banks of the Rio Grande
Where you get good booze and lots of jazz
In the city across we call Villa Acuna.

HEALTH TALKS

BY WILLIAM BRADY, M. D.

THE SPRAYING SEASON OPENS.

A father—a father, mind you—tells me about visiting the schoolroom where his young son is incarcerated—that is not my word, but the father's—and there he found the spray flying in all directions and the teacher apparently unconscious of the deadly work the untutored youngsters were perpetrating. This anxious father—there is, I estimate, about one anxious father to every 3,000 anxious mothers, in our population—this father wished something could be done to protect the decent or cleanly or educated class from the dirty, ignorant, vicious class in the schoolroom.

If this father would urge a campaign to protect the teachers and children against drafts, now, or wet feet, why, he would have no trouble at all in starting a movement or something. But the man is a wild dreamer, a reformer, a fanatic, to suggest a campaign to teach the teachers the uncleanliness, the bad manners and the perils of open face sneezing and coughing.

This man's little boy has got to go masked or take his chances. The board of education cannot consider how far a cough will carry nor what there may be in the spray. That is not a matter which concerns the educational authorities. The man is respectfully referred to the city health department.

This boy's father must try first to disabuse the minds of the teachers, the educational authorities, and the general run of people of the nice comfortable little delusion that little Johnny catches his "cold" from the weather or from leaving off his overcoat or from getting his feet wet.

Meanwhile everybody is entitled to spread his spray upon all who venture within 10 feet of his wide open features. That's the way to shoot a sample of whatever little trouble you've caught across the aisle, counter, desk, bench or sidewalk to the poor defenseless creatures who happen to be near you.

Nothing can be done about it. Why, such laws or ordinances as we have about spitting are just a joke; if plain spitting is only a joke who would have the temerity to intimate that there is anything filthy, offensive or dangerous about spraying one's neighbors with the spit in minute droplets when one takes a notion to cough or sneeze in public?

Don't be Utopian, sir! Put a face mask on the boy and bid them do their worst—a mask of ten layers of gauze or cheesecloth having not less than 32 threads to the inch. In this season of busy exchange that is about the only safe way to dress a child who must be exposed.

Exploiting the Immigrant.

The startling revelations of August V. Tozzi, president of the Italian immigration society, before a committee of congress, include the charge that fake American birth certificates are sold in Europe with the same lavishness as million mark notes on the streets of New York. When the immigrants arrive they are swindled right and left. The boarding house swindle is perhaps the commonest of all. Runners get a hold of their baggage and if they ever get it back they have to pay $15 or $20 for it. Tozzi says that he has information that immigrants were murdered and robbed after arrival. Such unscrupulous business ought to be stamped out.

Berlin Versus Rome.

Spain and Italy, drawing closer together, intend to withdraw from the league of nations. Instead of forming an alliance with Britain, as some press dispatches foreshadow, it will not be surprising if Italy and Spain do not take the lead in the formation of a Latin bloc, in which the South American republics would be included. Hilaire Belloc, able writer, predicts that the supremacy of the earth will pass from the Saxon races to the races with a Latin culture.

A Swiss Admiral At Last.

The hitherto considered impossible may come true. There may be a Swiss navy one of these days. Italy has offered Switzerland an outlet to the sea for Swiss commerce. The port of Vado is to be internationalized. That is, placed under control of the Italian government. There will be an extensive program of dock building and Switzerland is to foot the bill of that, and an extensive railway construction program in the bargain.

Farmers for a Thousand Years.

The French government announced recently that it would decorate with the order of agricultural merit the heads of families who could prove with documentary evidence that their ancestors had farmed the same land continuously for the last three centuries. So far 750 farmers have established that claim. But the record goes to Camille La Fargues, of Coutie, near Mollieres. This family has lived on the same estate and has worked the same soil since the year 772, the time of Charlemagne. That's a long time. These peasants are the backbone of France. No power can ever conquer them. They love the soil and will defend it with their lives and they have done it for the past thousand years or so.

Jesus a Historical Figure.

The critics persist in assailing Papini's masterwork: "The Life of Christ." From the spiritual center of high criticism, Berlin, comes the latest denunciation. Papini is called a simpleton by the learned doctor of theology, Wirtzhaus, because he holds the primitive faith. What Dr. Wirtzhaus and his colleagues are really attacking is something entirely different than the personality of Papini. Dr. Wirtzhaus is the man who declared just before the war that there really was no documentary evidence nor any other kind of evidence that Jesus ever lived. But 100,000 people gathered in the Moabite gardens of Berlin a few days after he made his declaration and to the accompaniment of half a dozen bands sang the old hymn, dating from before the days of Huss and Luther: "Jesus Lebt" (Jesus lives.)

Clothes Don't Make the Man.

The American soldier is to be the best dressed in the world, according to an announcement from the war department at Washington. A nifty made-to-measure suit of khaki will replace the ill-fitting clothes now assigned to army privates. The new uniform will be of smooth serge, with brass buttons, gold collar insignia and a snappy leather belt. It was not the uniform though that carried Belleau Wood or inspired the doughboys to charge at Chateau-Thierry. That was the American spirit.

"O Lucullus, O Goldzak, Here Was a Chance."

Cooking has been proclaimed the eighth art in France. The christening took place at a luncheon recently to which representatives of the foreign press in Paris were invited. Almost every province in France was represented in the menu by a special dish or famous wine or liqueur. Elzingberger, famous chef, superintended the cooking. The master florist of Versailles decorated the table. The idea is to show the pressmen to what delights the French kitchen can attain.

Empire.

Border tribes in the Punjab are on the warpath against the government in India. The British send a commissioner, a young Oxford graduate, with 500 soldiers. He summons the native chiefs and talks matters over with them. Mohammedans and Brahmins had been fighting one another. There are probably 100,000 armed tribesmen in the hills. The Englishman tells the warring parties to behave or he will clean up on both of them. The Indians believe him and peace is restored. They know they may wipe out his little force, but a bigger force will follow.

Red Tactics.

Communist deputies elected to the chambers of deputies in Holland refuse to vote on measures coming before the house. They also refrain from discussing matters under consideration. The question arises why were they candidates for election. The answer is the communists in all countries regard public office as a tribunal of propaganda. The only thing they will speak on is the evils of capitalism and the advent of the proletarian state. Everything is propaganda to them. Even articles appearing in the newspapers denouncing them is good propaganda. It keeps them before the eyes of the workers. That is what Newboldt says, the lone red member of the British house of commons.

'Founder's Roll' Gift Made In Col. Sawyer's Honor

Stone Mountain Confederate Memorial headquarters on Monday announced a "Founders' Roll" subscription of $1,000 by Miss Annie L. Sawyer in memory of her father, the late Colonel Benjamin F. Sawyer, a gallant Confederate soldier and a noted Georgia editor during reconstruction and for years thereafter.

Several of his ancestors fought in the Revolution, one of his uncles, a captain, being killed at the battle of Cowpens. Colonel Sawyer was born in Alabama and grew to young manhood in that state. He entered journalism in his teens and was one of the leading young editors of Alabama when the war came on betwee the states.

Immediately forsaking his newspaper work, he enlisted a company of volunteers, equipped it at his own expense, and joined Blythe's regiment of Mississippi volunteers. He rose to the rank of colonel, commanding the Twenty-fourth Alabama regiment.

At Shiloh his comand was almost wiped out. He saw his brother shot dead on that field and himself was wounded so severely with a bullet through his knee that the surgeons thought an amputation would be necessary. "If you cut off my leg and I get well, I will kill the man who did it," Colonel Sawyer told them. The surgeons sent him home and his wife nursed him back to health and he rejoined his command.

After the war came reconstruction, and in that epic struggle for white supremacy he played a leading and fearless role. His denunciation of carpetbag rule in a series of articles entitled "Chronicles of Georgia" was a rallying cry of patriotism. He fought the reconstruction regime with the same courageous spirit he had displayed on the battlefield, and his editorials and special articles were a powerful influence in breaking it down.

Colonel Sawyer founded and edited for several years an Atlanta daily newspaper called The Commonwealth. After that he moved to Rome and founded and edited the Rome Tribune, which later was consolidated with the Rome Herald, to form the Tribune-Herald. He wrote a number of books of fiction and reminiscences which were widely read.

In addition to his literary and editorial work, Colonel Sawyer was a remarkable inventor. He perfected and patented a machine for manufacturing square-bottomed paper bags and sold his rights for a substantial sum. He also invented a type-setting machine and an improved printing press. His latter years were spent in Atlanta and he died in this city in 1901.

GEORGIA MARINES PASS THROUGH PANAMA CANAL

A trip through the Panama canal has just been completed by Edwin Franklin Cowart, of Jeffersonville, Ga., and Marion F. Angles, of Eatonton, Ga., who arrived at San Diego, Cal., a few days ago after passing through the great waterway, while enroute to the west coast with a detachment of U. S. Marines. The two Georgians made the journey on the U. S. transport Argonne, according to a message received Monday by Captain C. A. Wynn, in charge of the local marine recruiting office up in the postoffice building.

Cowart is the son of James Cowart, of Jeffersonville, and joined the marines at the Macon office last December, while Angles, whose home is in Eatonton, enlisted at the Atlanta office in August, 1922. These two youths were stationed at Key West, Fla., for a few months, and when a detail of marines was assembled for duty at Californian posts, they were selected because of their excellent records while in the corps.

VICTROLA OFFERS MUSICAL COMEDY AND VAUDEVILLE

Nowadays the music of the leading vaudeville and comedy productions is enjoyed by countless thousands the country over at the same time the productions are playing in the great musical centers. The talking machine has brought all this about, and through the Victrola it is possible for every one to hear the foremost vaudeville and comedy stars, for like the greatest operatic and concert artists they have chosen Victor Records to bring their music and entertainment into the homes of the people.

It is but natural that one and the same medium should be chosen, for the fact that the Victrola and Victor records so perfectly reproduce the voices of Caruso, Galli-Curci, Chaliapin, the violin music of Kreisler, Elman, Heifetz, is also evidence that they likewise reproduce to perfection the humor of Sir Harry Lauder, and Will Rogers, the songs of Fanny Brice, of the Duncan sisters, and the music of Paul Whitman and his orchestra.

To hear the vaudeville and musical comedy on the Victrola is to be entertained by the "headliners" of the theatrical stage, to enjoy the captivating songs and music and droll humor of the current productions, and the newest dance music.

The Philomathean and Philosophian Literary societies of Locust Grove institute have chosen three debaters each to represent these organizations in the inter-society fall term debate scheduled to be held at the institute December 22.

The subject proposed for debate this fall is an historical one: "Resolved, That the Life Imprisonment of Napoleon on the Island of Saint Helena was Justifiable." D. E. Duggan, J. F. Hardin and William King will champion the affirmative side for the Philomatheans; F. M. Davis, Y. T. Sheffield and Swift Vaughter will defend the negative for the Philosophians.

BOND OF ALLEGED PICKPOCKET RAISED

Held under bond of $300 when arraigned in police court late Monday afternoon on charges of larceny from the person of J. A. Anderson, aged Gainesville, farmer, George Roberson, giving his address as Greensboro, was removed to the Fulton county tower only to be greeted with the information that his bond had been raised to $2,000 by Judge E. D. Thomas, of the Fulton superior court.

The sudden pyramiding of the alleged pickpocket's bond came after prosecutors in the case had made Judge Thomas fully acquainted with details of the alleged crime, and his action was taken as significant in the declared war instituted against what is alleged to be a gang of organized "pocketlifters."

Night Recorder A. W. Calloway stated that he was in full sympathy with Judge Thomas' action, and that the original bond would have been fixed higher had parties in the case made him more conversant with its nature.

Roberson was arrested early Saturday night after one of the most spectacular chases ever staged in the downtown section of the city.

Anderson was boarding a car at Whitehall and Alabama streets when an attempt was made to steal his purse and loose change. He appealed to bystanders to aid in capturing the fleeing suspect.

Pedestrians joined in the case, following Roberson into Broad street and by a circuitous route onto the roof of the McClure building where Roberson was captured.

Anderson appeared in police court and identified the prisoner as the man who had taken more than $20 from his pocket.

U. S. NAVY FLIERS TO DASH FOR POLE

ing" expedition were organized by the navy, others, perhaps under another flag might attempt and complete a journey to the pole by air before the Roosevelt party could make half the distance. The decision to employ naval aircraft followed.

Mr. Bartlett, who is a lieutenant commander in the naval reserve force, for the purpose of the polar expedition has already been called to active service in that rank and appointed to the special planning board of which he will also be recorder. Other members of the board are Commander William R. Furlong, Lieutenant Commander Ezra A. Allen and Lieutenant Commander Fitzhugh Green and Gilbert Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society.

May Use "Shenandoah."

Admiral Moffett's board has at its disposal all the government's records of previous Arctic explorations, as well as information that the American Geographic society is able to furnish. On the study of this data as well as records of weather conditions in the Arctic will be founded a recommendation as to whether the last lap of the journey shall be undertaken in airplanes equipped with skiis for landing on the ice, or with the great navy dirigible, Shenandoah.

Naval officials feel that the Shenandoah in many ways would be the most desirable ship for the dash, particularly because the airship can hover over the Arctic regions while motion picture records are made or scientific data otherwise obtained. There is no disposition, however, to risk the Shenandoah unless there is every reasonable prospect that she can successfully accomplish the mission.

Instructions Given.

The announcement by the navy department as to the instructions given to Admiral Moffett's board said that the purpose of the study would be "to devise plans for an extensive exploration over unknown regions adjacent to the pole."

"When the expedition shall sail," the announcement continued, "of what it shall consist and what its plans will be are not at present known. These topics among many others will be the subject of investigation by the board."

In writing Secretary Denby, under date of November 20, approving the project, President Coolidge expressed the belief that it would be "carried through with the thoroughness and efficiency which marks every project which the navy undertakes."

President Approves.

The president's letter follows:

"I desire to confirm by this letter," President Coolidge said, "the verbal authorization which I have already given you to proceed with the organization of a naval arctic expedition which will start in the coming year. The record of the army and navy in this line of endeavor is one of which the American people will always be proud, for it is marked by a spirit of heroism and devotion which is unexcelled in the history of exploration.

"As it fell to the navy to achieve the final goal, through the efforts of Admiral Peary, it is eminently fitting that the navy should continue the work, and I believe that the expedition which you have in view will be of great practical value, and will be carried through with that thoroughness and efficiency which marks every project which the navy undertakes."

national campaign fund and $25,000 to the 1920 fund of the republican party, although "a life-long democrat."

He explained that latter contribution as having been impelled by his disapproval of a reference made by one of the candidates which seemed to reflect personally upon the other. The money was spent by his direction for the purchase of space in New York newspapers in which was published a refutation of the allegation, Mr. Doheny said, the entire action being voluntary on his part.

"You did this simply to show your disgust at the unfair methods of attack?" asked Senator Norris, republican, Nebraska.

"Yes sir," responded Mr. Doheny.

"Then I consider it a pity that there are not more like you in our public life," continued the Nebraska senator.

Never Employed Fall.

Former Secretary Albert B. Fall, of the interior department, who conducted the leasing of the reserves, has never been in his employ, Mr. Doheny said in reply to questions but he added that "there is as good a job for him as we gave the late Secretary Lane, if he will have it."

"I've known Mr. Fall since 1884," he continued, "and I would like nothing better than an opportunity to show him that his reputation with me has not been injured."

Citing instances in which delay in drilling offset wells had caused great loss to owners of oil property, Mr. Doheny said his own company suffered more than one such experience.

Merchants Are Ready.

"We are nearer a real healthy condition in every phase of business than in years," he said. "Merchants have stocked up with a variety of Christmas goods, sensing the stable conditions which have shown steady adjustment during the past four months, and I have never seen a more confident air, a more profitable feeling on the part of everyone, than exists today. Christmas," he said, "why, we are on the threshhold of the greatest Christmas in twenty-five years, and the business of Atlanta, indeed, of Georgia, is approaching an era of stability and sound prosperity not unlike the best times of pre-war days."

A prominent Atlanta jeweler, one of the largest in the south, who is in a position to know the true conditions of the city and section, stated that the best indication of an improvement this year over the Christmas business season of 1922 is the fact that jewelry sales show a marked increase. "A great many people refer to this line of business as luxury," he said, "and our business is showing an increase of at least 20 per cent over 1922." The increase, he pointed out, is certainly greater in practically every other phase of business.

Normalcy Is Near.

The opinion of conservative business men is that conditions in the business world are better than in five years, more safe and rapidly approaching normalcy. Thrift is growing by leaps and bounds, according to bankers; manufacturers who feed Atlanta's trade territory are much easier on credits and are optimistic over the steady adjustment in all lines of business; the general public has settled down to a less speculative mood as regards conditions generally, and the net result, as one banker expressed it, is "that we are 25 per cent better off in every way than in 1922, less unrest among all classes, more money in the average man's pocket, easier credits, more confidence than at any time since 1917, and a general willingness to take things as they are and make the best of whatever comes."

Never before in Atlanta's history have greater preparations been made for Christmas shoppers. Merchants have added greater variety and quality to their stocks and increased their sales forces to care for the heavy holiday business.

"Shop early" is the slogan of the holiday season, and the public is urged to shop early not only to avoid the usual last-day rush, but to enable it to select its purchases from well-filled, new stocks.

DEMOCRATS GRIN AS G. O. P. FACTIONS ROW

only to have the house given an opportunity to vote on amendments to the rules they would have no difficulty in accomplishing their purpose. The democrats, these leaders said, also desired changes in the rules, and today's balloting showed that their votes, added to those of the progressives, constituted a majority.

Throughout the balloting for speaker today, the republican insurgents cast seventeen votes for Cooper, of Wisconsin, one of the leaders of their movement. This number of itself constitutes the balance of power, both on organization and legislation, but they claimed that in addition they could commend several of the five who steadily voted for Madden, of Illinois, chairman of the appropriations committee.

Garrett Leads on 3rd Ballot.

On the first ballot Gillett received 198 votes—ten short of a majority, and Garrett, 195. On the second ballot Gillett's total was 195, or eleven less than a majority, and Garrett's was 193. The third ballot saw Garrett forge ahead with 196 votes to 195 for Gillett. Announcement of this vote was greeted with wild cheers from the minority side.

The pendulum swung back to Gillett on the fourth and final ballot. He received 197 votes, eleven short of the necessary majority, while Garrett polled 196.

Victor Berger, of Wisconsin, the only socialist in congress, took no part in the balloting, announcing on each roll call that he voted "present." Madden cast his vote each time for Gillett, who voted "present" on the first ballot but did not vote thereafter. Garrett and Cooper consistently voted "present."

How They Vote.

The seventeen who supported Cooper were Beck, Browne, Frear, Lampert, Nelson, Peavey, Schafer Schneider and Voigt; all of Wisconsin; Clague, Davis, Keller and Knutson, republicans, of Minnesota; Kvale, independent, Minnesota; Wefald, Farmer-labor, Minnesota; Laguardia, republican, New York, and Sinclair, republican, North Dakota.

The five supporting Madden were King, Michaelson and Reid, Illinois, and James and Woodruff, Michigan, all republicans. On one ballot Representative Yates, republican, Illinois, cast a complimentary vote for his colleague, Woodruff is secretary of the progressive bloc.

A roll call by states at the outset of the house session disclosed that there were 418 of the 435 members present. Of these 220 were republicans and 195 democrats, and three scattering. One of the twelve democrats absent on the first roll call appeared later, and his vote enabled Garrett to take the lead on the third ballot.

Voting Was Slow.

The voting was unusually slow, forty-five minutes being required for each ballot. There was some delay between votes as Clark William Tyler, who called the house to order and presided, sought to restore sufficient order to enable the tellers to hear responses from members.

There was more than the usual confusion and milling on the floor as many of the members greeted each other for the first time since last March 4. Galleries were crowded long before the fight over the speakership began, and there was little lessening of attendance before the house adjourned after a session which lasted nearly four hours.

Although there was little prospect of a parliamentary battle in the senate the galleries there also were crowded with many unable to gain admission. Mrs. Coolidge, wife of the president, with a party of friends occupied the presidential seats. She returned to the white house immediately after adjournment and just as the contest in the house was getting under way.

Senate Session Short.

Senator Cummins, of Iowa, the president pro tem, called the senate to order at the stroke of twelve o'clock. After a prayer by the chaplain, the newly elected senators and those returned for another term took the oath of office which was administered by Senator Cummins. This ceremony completed, Senator Lodge, of Massachusetts, the republican leader, offered and the senate adopted resolutions providing for the appointment of a joint committee of the house and senate to notify the president that congress was in session and for formal notification to the house that the senate was ready to proceed to business.

Resolutions on the deaths of Senators Nelson, of Minnesota; Dillingham, of Vermont, and Nicholson, of Colorado, were adpoted, and the senate then adjourned out of respect to their memory. It will meet again at noon tomorrow.

Robinson Leads Minority.

Only four senators failed to attend the opening session. They were La Follette, of Wisconsin, the recognized leader of the progressive group in congress, who is ill at his home here; Caraway, democrat, Arkansas, and Sterling and Norbeck, republicans, South Dakota.

Before the senate session the democrats in caucus perfected their organization with the election of Senator Robinson, of Arkansas, as chairman of the caucus and party leader, vice Senator Underwood, of Alabama. Senator Walsh, of Montana, was reelected vice chairman; Senator Gerry, of Rhode Island, whip, and Senator King, of Utah, secretary. These candidates were chosen for senate office:

President pro tem, Senator Pittman, of Nevada; secretary, Edwin A. Halsey, of Virginia; sergeant-at-arms, John J. Burns, of New York.

PROGRESSIVE CAUCUS VOTES TO BATTLE ON.

Washington, December 3.—Insurgent republicans, after a caucus late Monday night, announced that they would continue to delay the election of a speaker indefinitely until the regular republican leaders give assurance that a chance to offer amendments to the rules will be given the progressives.

After the caucus, Representative Nelson, leader of the progressives, issued this statement:

"It is well known in the house that the rules need amendments and if the republican floor leader continues to refuse to discuss the revision of the rules with us and to give us an assurance that we will have a chance to offer amendments to rules for discussion and a record vote without being shut off by some move, the balloting will continue under the regular order and will continue indefinitely, because this is not only a matter of principle on which we cannot surrender, but is vital to the enactment of greatly needed constructive legislation."

HOUSE PROGRESSIVES HAVE 7-POINT DEMAND.

Washington, December 3.—(United News.)—House insurgents are delaying the election of the speaker in order to get permission from the regular republicans to propose changes in the house rules. They ask that the house be given a chance to vote on these changes. The present plan of the regulars is to seek adoption of the rules on the previous house without amendment. Here are the chief demands of the progressives:

1.—Appointment of a special committee to revise the rules of the house, this committee to report, and the proposed revision of the rules to take precedence over all other business.

2.—A rule which would make possible replacement of incompetent or neglectful committee chairmen.

3.—A rule permitting house members by petition to obtain a vote of the house upon the question of calling up a measure which had been pigeonholed by the committee in charge.

4.—Requirement of a two-thirds vote when the committee on rules brings in a special rule prohibiting amendments on a particular bill.

5.—When the chairman of the rules committee has for fifteen days failed to report to the house a measure upon which the committee has acted, any member of that committee to have the right to bring the measure and the report before the house for action.

6.—Every member to be given opportunity to offer amendments on the floor with five minutes time to explain them.

7.—Roll calls when demanded by one-fifth of the house upon any amendment rejected in committee of the whole.

HOUSE HOPPER CHOKED WITH BILLS.

Washington, December 3.—The deadlock in the house over the speakership did not deter members, both old and new, from dumping hundreds of bills today into the legislative hopper. The measures must remain there, however, until the house is organized and their reference to committees is possible.

A number of the bills embodied new ideas in legislation, but a majority were a revival of proposals which failed to receive attention in the last congress. In the latter class were the anti-lynching bill of Representative Dyer, republican, Missouri; the "blue-sky" bill of Representative Dennison, republican, Illinois, and various proposals for a soldiers' bonus, including that of Representative Hill, republican, Maryland, to finance the payment with a tax on light wines and beer.

Representative Treadway, republican, Massachusetts, offered a measure for the establishment in the interstate commerce commission of an anthracite bureau at which all persons engaged in the industry would be required to register and where authority over shipments of cars and quality of anthracite entering into interstate commerce could rest.

Several bills dealing with immigration were tossed into the hopper. Chief among these was that of Chairman Johnson, of the immigration committee, for a tightening of restrictions. He also proposed that aliens convicted of violating the narcotics and prohibition laws be deported. Representative Griffin, democrat, New York, proposed admission of all aliens now detained at American ports because of the exhaustion of their nations' quotas, providing they are otherwise eligible.

Representative Tincher, republican, Kansas, put in a bill to abolish the railroad labor board.

TWO PRECEDENTS FOR SPEAKER BATTLE.

Washington, December 3.—The situation developed today in the house by the speakership row has two precedents.

The first was in the thirty-sixth congress, the house taking 54 ballots between December 5, 1859, and February 1, 1860, before the deadlock was broken.

The second was in the fifty-second congress, which convened in 1891. The house failed to organize on the first day, but elected a speaker on the second day of its session.

Probably the most spectacular fight ever waged in the house was that in 1910, which resulted in the shearing of many powers from Speaker Cannon.

BRYAN SITS IN ON HOUSE GAME.

Washington, December 3.—William Jennings Bryan took a hand in the attempted organization of the house today by visiting the capitol to urge various democrats in the event they could not elect Representative Garrett, democrat, of Tennessee, speaker, to join with the progressive bloc in putting over an insurgent republican.

ROME MERCHANT TAKES OWN LIFE

Constitution Bureau
T. J. Bryson, Mgr. Phone 184

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) George W. Owens, secretary and treasurer of the Owens Hardware company of Rome, this afternoon shot himself to death with a pistol in his room at the home of Mrs. R. A. Johnson. Despondency brought on by ill health is believed to have caused the act.

Noticeably despondent for the past several days, Mr. Owens left his place of business at noon today. When he did not return by 2:30 o'clock, a telephone call to his home caused an investigation. He had gone direct to his room on reaching home, and muffling a small caliber revolver with his handkerchief, shoe himself through the head. He had been dead at least two hours when discovered.

For many years secretary of the Nixon Hardware company of this city, Mr. Owens was widely known throughout this section of the state. He was a cousin of T. B. Owens, one of the best-known business men of this city. He is survived by two brothers, one a resident of Tennessee and another of Texas.

Two Flee Gang in Floyd.

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Nothing further had been heard tonight from Mason Hart and Ben Phillips, white convicts who made good their escape from the Floyd county convict camp on the Black Bluff road early this morning.

This is the second time both men have escaped, both having been sent from Chattooga county to Floyd because Chattooga county officials found them too difficult to confine. Hart has served one year of a seven-year sentence for forgery while Phillips has served a little more than three years of a 15-year sentence for assault to murder.

Seek Check "Artist."

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special.) Local police authorities are looking for a smooth "bogus" check passer who "flim-flammed" a local concern out of $10 on Saturday by posing as an employe of the state highway department.

The man who gave his name as James T. Wright appeared at a Broad street store and bought five bushels of oats, claiming that they were for a road gang working on the Alabama road. In payment, he tendered a check for $15 signed by "Charles M. Storey & Sons," alleging that it was a check furnished him by the highway department for expenses. He also asked for a statement of his purchase in order to "keep his books straight."

He left the store with the $10 change, ostensibly to go for a truck to get the oats. He has not been seen or heard from since. Chief of Police Harris has taken up the matter and officers in other cities have been asked to keep a lookout for the man.

Bootleggers Quake.

Rome, Ga., December 3.—(Special) Floyd county bootleggers are quaking in their shoes.

Opening the December term of the city court this morning Judge John W. Bale got things well under way by sentencing J. L. Ray, a white man who pleaded guilty to violation of the prohibition law, to 12 months on the chaingang without the alternative of paying a fine. And to top this off, Ray agreed to withdraw an appeal now pending in another case in which he was also sentenced to 12 months. This means that he goes at once to begin a two-year sentence.

William Swint, the only other white man who had the nerve to plead guilty during today's session, admitted having two gallons of liquor in his car. He claimed that it was for his personal use. As a consequence, Judge Bale fined him $200 with the alternative of breaking rocks for nine months. In addition, an almost new car Swint owns has been confiscated and will be sold as a donor carrier.

With the city court about to open and Judge John Bale ready to dispense straight chaingang sentences on bootleggers, both the sheriff's office and the local police department went on a rampage Saturday night and yesterday, corralling more alleged violators of the prohibition law than have been gathered in in the same length of time in many months.

J. L. Ray and Williams Swint, both of whom pleaded guilty before Judge Bale this morning; Will Cagle, who lives on the Dalton road some 31 mile from Rome; Jesse Pendley and Joe Jackson, from the environs of Lindale, and Claude Beard, of the fourth ward of this city, were raked in. In every case, officers say, the prisoners were caught "with the goods on them." All will be given hearings at the present term of the city court.

Killed by Mule.

Yaarab Chanters Discuss Concert Plans at Supper

BY PAUL WARWICK.

The Yaarab Chanters are planning, and planning mighty well, for the minstrel they will hold the festive nights of December 20, 21 and 22.

Atlanta finds it hard to find fault with the Chanters—their voices and the exquisite harmony with which their voices blend is ordinarily enough to stay any criticism and bring forth tumultous praise. This time especially.

Simply because the Fanfare—that's what they will call it—is for the benefit of the Scottish Rite Crippled Children's home. The deep and human spirit which stimulates that good work will never be doubted; its fame has spread from the Golden Gate to Nova Scotia, from the keys of Florida to the stormy region above Belgrade lakes in Maine. The Scottish Rite hospital is an Atlanta institution, an Atlanta institution that looms large because we know it is one thing within our confines that the world knows, knows well and appreciates.

Atlanta never fails to do her part when she is called on to help these worthy tots who depend so largely on us for a chance to get on in the world and correct their physical faults.

The Chanters, this year, are going to do the job in ample style. Their voices have never rung with such sincere and lovable harmony as they will chant when Atlanta visits the Atlanta theater to hear them. Their spontaneous humor and enthusiasm has never asserted itself as it will when they mount that stage.

A bird supper at the East Lake Country club of the Athletic club Monday night helped to prove that. They met there to make their final plans. Forrest Adair was toastmaster; speeches were made on every hand, from Frank Cundell, whose mastery trains the chanters, to the stumbling phrases of the newspapermen who attended. It was a great occasion, and the lot who were there were thoroughly converted to the cause of doing anything that will help the tots who inhabit that home on Atlanta's outskirts.

Complete plans will be announced later. No detail of the program will be omitted.

But it is for the Crippled Children's home and that is all that Atlanta asks.

That, and the rest is worth while.

Georgian Is Shot On Chipley Street, Fatally Wounded

Chipley, Ga., December 3.—Without uttering a word Homer G. Irvin shot and probably fatally wounded John McGehee, his brother-in-law, on the principal street of Chipley this morning.

Irvin shot at McGehee five times, inly one of the bullets taking effect. The bullet which wounded McGehee entered the left breast. He was rushed to the city hospital in Columbus for treatment.

OLD FEUD BLAMED FOR SHOOTING.

Columbus, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—As the consequence of an old feud, it is understood, John McGehee, well known Harris county man who lived with his wife and two children at Chipley, was shot and perhaps fatally wounded on the main business street of the Harris county town this morning by his brother-in-law, Homer G. Irvin, according to information reaching Columbus. McGehee is in a serious condition.

In a long distance telephone conversation with Mayor R. B. Durham, of Chipley, it was learned that five shots are understood to have been fired at Mr. McGehee by Mr. Irvin, only one of them taking effect, the bullet entering the right breast. A pistol was the weapon used.

State Bankers Favor Exempting New Plants From Georgia Taxes

Representative Stovall, of Elbert, Monday night announced that the executive council of the Georgia Country Bankers' association had indorsed his measure to exempt from taxation for a period of seven years all new enterprises and cheese and creamery plants into the state.

The measure is a constitutional amendment and is designed, the author said, to encourage new industrial enterprises to locate in Georgia. The bill is on the house calendar.

TEDDER FOUND GUILTY

Mrs. Tedder and Husband Convicted of Murder.

De Land, Fla., December 3.—Fred Tedder, indicted jointly with his wife, Mrs. Rhoda Tedder, for murder in connection with the death of Courtland Smith, a farmer of this county, was found guilty of murder by a jury in circuit court here this afternoon. He was recommended to mercy, the verdict carrying with it a sentence of life imprisonment.

Mrs. Tedder was found guilty Saturday. She likewise was recommended to mercy, the verdict also carrying with it a sentence of imprisonment for life.

At the time of the shooting two years ago Mrs. Tedder was the wife of Courtland Smith. She married Tedder eight months after the slaying. Smith was shot to death in a pasture near his home, and it was the contention of the state that the two conspired to kill Smith. Alleged confessions of both obtained shortly after the slaying were produced by the state at both trials.

COUNCILMEN NAMED AT LAWRENCEVILLE

Lawrenceville, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—In the election held today to fill the expired terms of J. J. Baggett and G. C. Montgomery, Councilman Baggett was reelected to succeed himself and R. L. Robinson was elected to succeed Mr. Montgomery. Mr. Baggett received 161 votes, Mr. Robinson, 155; Dr. Nicholson, 154, and H. H. Pharr, 133.

WARRANTS ARE SERVED ON GOVERNOR M'CRAY

Indianapolis, Ind., December 3.—Governor Warren T. McCray today was served with warrants for his appearance to answer to the charges contained in eight indictments returned against him by the Marion county grand jury last Friday. Bond of $25,000 was provided by 12 local men.

The indictments resulted from a grand jury investigation of the governor's financial transactions following admission to his creditors last August that he was unable to meet immediately his obligations to them.

The criminal charges against the governor made in the indictments are embezzlement, larceny, forgery, obtaining money by a false statement and issuance of fraudulent checks.

Harry C. Sheridan, master in chancery of the federal court, today resumed the hearing on a petition of three Fort Wayne, Ind., banks to have the governor declared bankrupt. It was indicated that attorneys for the petitioners would attempt to show that the executive has placed inflated values on his assets and especially his farm holdings.

The warrants were served on the governor by Sheriff George Snider at the office of Mr. Noel, who is the executive's attorney.

Republican leaders in the party organization and in the Indiana legislature have been asked to meet with Clyde A. Walb, republican state chairman, here next Wednesday to consider a course of action relative to Governor McCray's indictment. The governor has declared he does not intend to resign.

RAIL LABOR BOARD AWARDS WAGE HIKES

Chicago, December 3.—Increase in wages totalling approximately $628,429.08 were awarded to track foremen, track laborers and other employees represented by the United Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way employees and Railway Shop Laborers, and the Brotherhood of Railroad Way Station Employees in a decision announced tonight by the United States railroad labor board. The increase range from one to two cents an hour, and, according to statisticians of the board, affect approximately 22,612 employees, of seven railroads. The parties failed to reach a settlement after their disputes had been remanded to them for further negotiations in a decision of the board issued June 30.

A number of other carriers were involved in the original controversy, but have been settled.

HOLD LEVY LEGAL ON SHAREHOLDERS OF DEFUNCT BANK

Washington, December 3.—The American National Bank of Macon, Ga., under a decision of the supreme court today, can levy an assessment of 100 per cent upon the shareholders of the defunct Commercial National bank of Macon.

The lower federal courts held that such an assessment could be made. The American National, when the Commercial National went into voluntary liquidation, purchased its business and assets. It was contended by the shareholders of the Commercial National that the American National had not created by its purchase such a relationship as would warrant it in holding the shareholders of the Commercial National liable for assessments on their stock to provide funds necessary to meet the obligations of the Commercial National.

WHITE HOUSE UNSAFE, SAYS ARMY ENGINEER

Washington, December 3.—The white house has been declared unsafe. Conditions there are such as to require that immediate remedial measures be taken to prevent a possible calamity.

These disclosures were made today by Major General Lansing H. Beach, chief of engineers of the army, in his annual report to the secretary of war. Congress is asked for $400,000 for the work of reconstructing the interior portion of the famous building, to make it secure.

"A preliminary study of the situation in the interior upper portion of the executive mansion has indicated a condition which renders the building unsafe, both from the standpoint of security in the structural features, and the fire hazard present," said Major General Beach.

"The conditions are such as to require that immediate conditions measures be taken to prevent a possible calamity. These conditions have been called to the attention of the president, and his authority for the inclusion of the item submitted herewith ($400,000) has been requested. While such approval has not yet been secured, the item is tentatively included herein."

Corpse of Woman Battered, Bruised Cousin Is Held

Huntington, W. Va., December 3. The body of Mrs. Frank McQuaid, bearing many bruises, was found in her home here today. Elmer Neff, cousin by marriage of the victim, was arrested and Chief of Police C. A. Midkiff lodged a charge of murder against him.

Mrs. McQuaid was attacked in her bedroom. The authorities reported that the room bore evidence of a struggle and that bones in the woman's body were fractured. Mrs. McQuaid was a frail woman, weighing less than 100 pounds.

Persons residing near the McQuaid home told the police that shortly after they heard screams a man ran from the house.

7 Miners Killed, 51 Hurt as Cages Fall Down Shaft

Sheffield, England, December 3.—Seven miners were killed and 51 injured, 15 seriously, when several cages fell to the bottom of the shaft of the Nunnery Mine near here today.

RAIL VALUATION WORK WILL STAND

Washington, December 3.—The interstate commerce commission today refused a demand that it reconsider all of its work in the physical valuation of the country's railroads.

Petitions making such a demand, presented by the national conference on valuation of American railroads, which is headed by Senator La Follette of Wisconsin, were dismissed.

The conference, whose program was drawn up last spring at a meeting in Chicago attended by western political leaders and others, sought to have the commission establish the original cost of property investment and labor in railroads, as well as other data. All the existing valuation work of the commission was attacked as unsound.

The commission's decision today held that it was practically impossible to find the facts as to the expenditures actually made by railroads in their period of their early history.

"There must be some limit to our expenditures of public funds in research," the decision said. "We are of the opinion that our present course has been in substantial compliance with the valuation statute."

Commissioners Eastman and McManamy dissented. Commissioner Potter, although concurring in the decision, suggested that the commission had taken "far too seriously the burden of finding original costs."

The commission directed that notices of all proceedings in arriving at valuations should hereafter be served upon Senator La Follette for his information as chairman of the conference.

PACT ON SMUGGLING WITH CANADA ASSURED

Washington, December 3.—Administrative arrangements between the United States and Canadian governments will be made effective "in a reasonable time" to effect an interchange between them of information respecting the clearance of vessels carrying intoxicating liquors from Canadian ports; the smuggling of liquors into the United States and smuggling of narcotics, silks and other merchandise from the United States into Canada.

This announcement was made today by the state department, after Assistant Secretary Moss, of the treasury, had conferred with other members of the mission which attended the recent conference at Ottawa, Canada, with him. The statement said treaty arrangements between the governments also would be necessary before some of the proposals could be put into effect.

It was the consensus of opinion, the statement added, that the representatives of the Canadian government participating in the conference "indicated a sincere desire to cooperate with the United States so far as might be possible under their laws."

POLICE HUNT THIEVES AFTER MARIETTA RAID

Marietta, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—Police here are searching for burglars who entered five homes in Marietta last night, and escaped with jewelry and clothing valued at several hundred dollars. Several shots were fired at the marauders in the home of M. L. McNeel, president of the Citizens National bank and the McNeel Marble company, which was occupied, in the absence of the family, by two youths, Robert Read and Jean Gifford.

Apparently, the men were not hit by the bullets. They fled in a waiting automobile.

The homes entered, in addition to Mr. McNeel's were, Dr. W. H. Perkinson, county physician; W. B. Stevens, president of the W. B. Stevens Lumber company; Ralph Hancock, president of the Marietta Ice & Coal company, and R. H. Wade, another prominent citizen.

The shooting occurred at about 4 o'clock this morning, when the two boys were aroused by the sound of the intruders.

The thievxes secured valuable jewelry in the Hancock home, fleeing when Mrs. Hancock aroused her husband.

Loss at the Stevens' home was placed at $100 worth of jewelry and a suit of clothes.

Police are said to have several clues and arrests are expected within a short time.

Coolidge Sends His Good Wishes To Presbyterians

Cleveland, Ohio, December 3.—Greetings from President Coolidge, in which he expressed regret at his inability to attend the Presbyterian national conference, were read at the opening session here tonight. Characterizing the scope of the church activities as "particularly impressive," the president said that it was "gratifying to know of the remarkable progress that is being accomplished by a church which has always been so devoted to the broadest public and social interest."

The message was read by Moderator Charles F. Wishart, of Wooster, Ohio. Plans will be made during the four days' sessions for increasing the work of the church, and for the apportionment among the 46 synods of a budget of $15,000,000 for the fiscal year beginning April 1, 1924.

Rev. Wishart and Mrs. Mabel Walker Willebrandt, an assistant attorney general of the United States, were the speakers tonight.

PIGEONS BEING USED FOR SMUGGLING DOPE

Los Angeles, Cal., December 3.—Trained carrier pigeons are bringing narcotics across the border from Mexico in such quantities that the price of at least one drug in underworld markets has stumped perceptibly, according to federal agents here.

Hundreds of these pigeons, each carrying a moisture-proof package of the drug fastened beneath the body or under the wing, are liberated from the Mexican headquarters of a smuggling gang at specified times, according to narcotic agents. A few hours later they are being "checked up" at their owners' homes on the American side of the line, it is said.

The statement was issued, when one of the border flying birds was wounded by a hunter and picked up by a narcotic agent who happened to be one watching the air for a smuggler's plane.

An intensive campaign will be put on Thursday and Friday of this week and unless the drive is successful, the dissolution will follow.

LA FOLLETTE BOOM HITS SOUTH DAKOTA

Pierre, S. D., December 3.—A move to secure the majority presidential indorsement of the republican state proposal convention of Senator Robert M. La Follette, of Wisconsin, was inaugurated here today by a group of progressive republicans.

A metig of La Follette supporters was called to consider plans for the convention fight against the supporters of Senator Hiram Johnson and President Coolidge.

The chief center of interest in the democratic convention maneuvering is the determined efforts of elements in both parties to effect fusion between the democrats and farmer-laborites. The democrats have declared that all plans or joint action must be based on retention of W. G. McAdoo for the presidential indorsement.

BEWARE THE COUGH OR COLD THAT HANGS ON

Chronic coughs and persistent colds lead to serious lung trouble. You can stop them now with Creomulsion, an emulsified creosote that is pleasant to take. Creomulsion is a new medical discovery with twofold action; it soothes and heals the inflamed membranes and kills the germ.

Of all known drugs, creosote is recognized by the medical fraternity as the greatest healing agency for the treatment of chronic coughs and colds and other forms of throat and lung troubles. Creomulsion contains, in addition to creosote, other healing elements which soothe and heal the inflamed membranes and stop the irritation and inflammation, while the creosote goes on to the stomach is absorbed into the blood, attacks the seat of the trouble and destroys the germs that lead to consumption.

Creomulsion is guaranteed satisfactory in the treatment of chronic coughs and colds, bronchial asthma, catarrhal bronchitis and other forms of throat and lung diseases, and is excellent for building up the system after colds or the flu. Money refunded if any cough or cold, no matter of how long standing, is not relieved after taking according to directions. Ask your druggist. Creomulsion Co., Atlanta, Georgia.—(adv.)

SECOND AUTO VICTIM DIES MONDAY MORNING

Fatally injured when he lost control of his automobile Sunday night, John Smith, age 35, of Lakewood Heights, died at Grady hospital early Monday morning.

Smith was driving on Central avenue when he lost control of his machine from some undetermined cause. The machine swerved and crashed into a telephone pole in front of 210 Central avenue.

His death marked the second fatal automobile accident Sunday, the first resulting in the instant death of Homer Ergle, son of Mr. and Mrs. O. S. Ergle, of 7 1-2 West Georgia avenue, who was celebrating his thirteenth birthday when killed by Assistant Fire Chief Short's automobile, driven by Fireman H. A. Ewing, at South Pryor street and Georgia avenue Sunday night. The fire department automobile was speeding in answer to a call at 12 Ridge avenue when the accident occurred.

Funeral services for the Ergle boy will be held at 2:30 o'clock Tuesday afternoon. Rev. W. T. Moore, pastor of the West End Christian church, will officiate. Interment will be at Westview. Hunter, Blanchard and Gartrell in charge. Ergle's schoolmates will form an honorary escort at the funeral.

Huhn Will Head Mobile Outfit

Mobile, Ala., December 3.—(Special.)—Emil Huhn for two years first baseman of the Mobile Southern baseball club, signed a contract today to manage the locals for the season of 1924. Huhn came to Mobile today from his home at Ardin, Mich., in response to a telegraphic request from President R. M. Weinacker. The player and official were not together many minutes when the contract was signed. The signing of Huhn was generally approved by all the fans of the city.

Huhn for two years has been the most popular ball player on the club and he was regarded as one of the board of strategy. He will succeed Bert Neihoff, who surprised all fans in the circuit two weeks ago by signing a contract with the Atlanta club at a higher salary than Mobile was paying him. Huhn will play first base and manage the club.

The new manager years ago was a catcher with the Cincinnati Reds, later played with the Milwaukee team of the American association and in 1921 was the manager of the Augusta, Ga., team of the South Atlantic league.

Huhn will begin lining up his team for the coming season at the meeting of the baseball moguls next Monday at Chicago where he will meet President Weinacker.

It was announced that Mobile had signed Pitcher "Skeets" McBride with Little Rock and Memphis early last season and previous to that with the Jackson, Miss., team of the Cotton States league.

Stegman Starts Basketball Squad on Grind for Hard Schedule During the Winter

BY DELACY ALLEN.

Athens, Ga., December 3.—(Special.)—With the unexpected continuance of Ed Gurr in college, the prospects for a Georgia basketball team are today brighter than they have been at any time since the great team of 1921, when the Bulldogs lost a southern championship to Kentucky in the Atlanta tournament by the narrow margin of one point.

Coach Stegeman received assurance Monday morning from Captain Gurr, who has held this honor for two consecutive years, that barring providential hindrance, marriage, etc., he would remain in college this year and finish his graduate course.

Coach Stegeman started practice for the cagers this afternoon by putting them through a light workout at the city "Y," issuing for their general use, last year's abbreviated second hand clothes. Practice will continue every afternoon at the "Y" until the completions and alterations now being made on the college gym are completed.

Of the varsity squad of 1922, Captain Joe Bennett and Charlie Wiehrs, of football fame, Pogey Williams and Bob Richardson are all in school, and will be eligible for play this year.

From the freshmen class of last year several good men will be available, who are expected to be of high class calibre, Tippin, center; Satloff and Nolen Richardson, forwards, and Nelson and Kilpatrick, guards, are men who could give a creditable account of themselves, most any evening for any one's entertainment.

This boy, Nolen Richardson, an Atlanta Tech Hi product, can do anything with a basketball that is being done lately in the best regulated basketball families and is expected to be about the best forward at Georgia since the days of Albert Scott.

Red Pound Back.

And besides all these, Red Pound is back in school. Red played forward with Eddie Rawson on the Georgia teams of 1920 and '21, but retired from strenuous life the latter year for the purpose of getting married. But now he is back in school, rearing to go, and those who have seen him in action at the "Y" say that the lay-off has not in the least affected his uncanny ability for ringing the hoop from any position of the court.

From appearances at present, it seems that Coach Stegeman will be able to give Georgia fans a better and more colorful team than any they have enjoyed in many a year. For with Gurr at center, Pound and Nolen Richardson at forward, and Joe Bennett and Wiehrs or Bob Richardson at guard, besides a wealth of material from which to draw on for reserves, he should have five men who should be hard opponents to any bunch of southern contenders.

It is rumored about that the team is to get a northern trip for their Xmas present, but as the schedule hasn't been completed no one can say definitely as to that. However, before the season is over, there will be ample opportunity to find out whether they are living up to advance notices.

MANY PARTIES ARE SLATED FOR TECH GRIDIRON SQUAD

The football season is over so far as the actual playing is concerned, but there is still much spice left on the program. For, now that training rules are off and the fellows are allowed to eat just what they wish, and as much as they wish, a great deal of genuine interest is manifested in the coming parties and things at which the members of the Tech football team will be the honor guests.

Wednesday night, tomorrow night, to be exact, Joe Rhodes will entertain the football team at his home on Fifteenth street. This supper is an annual affair, and is always looked forward to with keen anticipation.

Then, on Saturday night week, Billy Oldnow will entertain the boys at his home in Druid Hills. Billy is quite an entertainer, and this party is the center of lots of conversation, both before and after its occurrence.

The culminating event will be the football banquet at the Capital City club on the night of December 14. This is the big party given each year by the athletic association for the team, field attendants, and all who had a part in the season.

At this banquet, the captain and alternate for the ensuing year will be elected. In addition, the retiring capitain is awarded with a "T" ring, perhaps the most coveted award to be given by the school. This banquet marks the close of all things pertaining to football, and usually assembles something like a hundred people; including varsity, scrubs, rubbers, athletic association officers, coaches, camp followers, supporters and those interested in Tech in general.

BASKETBALL LEAGUE WILL MEET TONIGHT

At the meeting of the Sunday school basketball leagues to be held Tuesday evening, the teams that have registered will have their last opportunity of making arrangements to be assigned to one of the leagues.

The first games will be played Saturday night of this week and the schedules will be drawn up and announced through the papers on Thursday.

To date a number of the teams have registered but still have some of their fees to be paid, and these must be taken care of at this meeting, or some definite arrangements made.

Meeting will be called at 7:30 sharp at Central Y. M. C. A.

DEMPSEY WILL BE READY FOR FIGHTS THIS SUMMER

BY ROBERT EDGREN.

Jack Dempsey says that he knows nothing about Billy McCarney's plans for Firpo and another Dempsey-Firpo fight next Labor Day in New York, but that he'll be ready for anything that comes along.

"Labor Day is a long time and anything can happen before that," Dempsey said, "but if Firpo shows he's in shape for a return match and the public and promoters want it, I'll be easy to talk to. Firpo is entitled to a return match. He sure gave me a fight while it lasted.

"I won't forget that first sock he handed me when I missed my first punch. Wouldn't it have been a joke if that punch had dropped me and Firpo had knocked me out with one blow? Can you imagine how many people would have said I was a cheese champion, thank my good legs for carrying me right along there for a minute when my head was gone, for I never did remember much about that first round.

"I don't think Firpo would have stood up under a punch like that, though he did take a bunch of them and kept on getting up. Guess I didn't get him just right, or he'd have stayed down sooner, but I wasn't in any condition to time and place them the way I wanted to. He's a big, tough, strong fellow, and game. I'll enjoy fighting him again, just to see what I can do now that I know a little more about him.

"If I fight Firpo again, Labor Day or any other time, I think I'll win about as quickly as last time. I won't try to get that bird with the first punch again and then stand still and sock with him like a Longshoreman. That's throwing away science and trusting too much to luck. Next time I'll fight him in an entirely different way, but it may not look much different from the ringside. One thing, I'm not going to push my chin in the way of his right hand the way I did last trip. I won't give him any more chances to land that right than I have to. Firpo may not be so confident and aggressive next time. After all, I knocked him out."

A John Sullivan Tour For Firpo.

Billy McCarney and Hugh Gartland, who handled Firpo's barnstorming trip before Firpo fought Dempsey, expect to put Firpo through a regular John L. Sullivan tour when he returns from South America in April. But instead of going around the country meeting all comers, the way John L. did when he was at the top of his form, Firpo will take on about a dozen bouts with heavyweights in different parts of the country.

It won't be impossible to find a dozen good men who will be willing to take a chance with the walloping Argentine, and perhaps some of them will give him a battle.

Soldier Jones, of Canada, who knocked out Jack Renault a couple of times and has a habit of knocking Harry Greb down whenever they meet in the ring, might produce some action, although he weighs only about 180. Jack Renault would give him a fight, for Renault has speed and science as well as a pretty fair punch, and has gained confidence through knocking out Godfrey, Herman, Fulton, Floyd Johnson and a few others.

Floyd, unless he is discouraged, would give Firpo a fight. Tiny Herman, with his wild wallop, and a lot of middlewestern heavies could fill up the string; and such a list of bouts scattered around the country would probably make more money for Firpo than a return match with Dempsey.

But Jack Kearns, Dempsey's manager, doesn't think Firpo's handlers are going to take any risks.

"Firpo won't be any better than when he fought Jack before, because he isn't going to learn anything between now and Labor Day, if there is an offer worth considering for a Dempsey-Firpo fight on that date," said Jack Kearns when I called him on the phone.

"Going around the country meeting set-ups never did any fighter any good. That's what they're planning for Firpo. He'll be dragged around meeting easy marks as long as they can take in any money at the gate. He won't fight Renault or anybody else who might give him trouble. There are two or three heavyweights around who might take Firpo. All it needs is a punch on the right spot. He isn't hard to knock down. Jack proved that. He'll be easier next time because he won't have so much confidence.

"They aren't going to take any chance of spoiling Firpo for the show business and another big title fight, and that means they'll give him a bunch of saps to fight. He won't learn anything from knocking over a few saps. It may even make him careless and start him pulling his punches.

"What would I do with Firpo if I had him? Well, I'd never want Firpo while Jack Dempsey is alive and has a hand to hit with and a leg to stand on, but if I was Firpo's manager, I'd handle him the way I handled Dempsey. I'd pick the biggest and toughest of them and send him in to knock them out or be knocked out. He'd learn something in every fight, and if he had the stuff in him he'd fight his way up. If he didn't have the stuff—well—the sooner some sucker socked him the better. If they handle Firpo that way he may be dangerous yet, but if they just go out to get the easy money, taking no risks and dodging the tough ones, he's going to be soft picking for someone. If he is handled that way they won't have to ring the bell again at the end of the first round with Jack. It won't last that long."

Must Learn to Use Left Hand.

There are several things Firpo will need to learn through hard experience in the ring. He must watch the man he is fighting, not turn to look at the referee. He must get up quickly after taking part of the count if he's knocked down, not get up so slowly that his opponent has time to cross half the ring after Firpo's hands and knees have left the floor, and catch him unguarded. And he will have to learn to use his left hand as freely and naturally as his right. There never was a champion yet who couldn't use his left hand in a fight.

Sullivan's right was his best, but his left nearly as good. Corbett was a left-hand jabber and little else. Fitzsimmons hit hardest with his left. Jim Jeffries was naturally left handed, and his left was his best punching hand.

BO M'MILLIN ARRANGING SCHEDULE

New Orleans, December 3.—Anxious to provide better games for the Centenary college football eleven next season, Coach "Bo" McMillin will devote the next few weeks to communicating with and visiting various institutions. Although a contract has not been signed, a second meeting with Boston college, which defeated the Gentlemen 14 to 0 this fall, is regarded as almost a certainty. Marquette is being discussed as a possible opponent and Purdue and Notre Dame will be asked for games. Centenary is a candidate for election to membership in the southwestern conference and if it joins that organization, will book games with conference elevens wherever possible.

During the season just closed the Gentlemen are believed to have topped every eleven in the south in points scored, with the exception of King college, of Bristol, Va., which would have had small chance of defeating a team of Centenary's caliber. Centenary scored 371 points in 11 games against 43 for its opponents. The only game lost was the contest with Boston college.

A PIECE FOR THE PAPER

By Paul Warwick

Speaking of Conferences

The conference season closed yesterday at noon, down in Savannah. Wait a minute, now, I know what I'm talking about!

You could float the Leviathan in the oceans of ink that have been spiled about the Southern Intercollegiate conference, the Western conference and all the other football conferences—but this conference I'm talking about is an honest-to-goodness conference with a deep bass voice.

This writer doesn't profes to be an authority on football and organized football competition, but he defies the world to tell him anything about conferences. And you can say what you jolly well please, there never will be as much concentrated essence of excitement injected into any intercollegiate conference as there is into one Methodist conference. The North Georgia conference convened in Atlanta some time ago.

So we'll take the South Georgia conference, for instance, and also for personal reasons.

* * * * * * *

There was more excitement in some scores and scores of south Georgia homes yesterday afternoon than you could ever pack into Grant field. A Tech-Georgia game would be an innocuous afternoon, comparatively. Think about it, if you can.

The cabinet—presiding elders and the bishop—are holding conclave in Savannah. In a very few minutes the appointments for the next year are going to be read. Back home in the parsonages, the folks are waiting. I can see 'em now; in fact, I'm almost there myself. Sitting there by the frieplace, reading, rocking, looking at the clock. Mothers are sweet and dominant figures in parsonages very busy folk, but—

* * * * * * *

No time for housework now. Tomorrow we may be packing up to move to Albany, or Waycross, or the Mulberry parsonage in Macon, or Leesburg, or Ty Ty. No telling. . . . No, son, you've had enough cake. . . .

Dad said he'd rush out and wire us just as soon as the appointments were read. Who's that at the door? Run and see, Paul. Come back, Loy, let brother do it. Who was it? Oh, the grocery boy. . . . Thought it might be the wire from dad. . . . The clock still ticks—slow, slow. . . .

They may move us this year. We haven't been here but three years, but there may be a vacancy somewhere and dad may have to fill it. You know Brother Thomas has been at Columbus four years and there's no telling. Go on and study now, we ought to hear in a few minutes. . . . There's the telephone—it may be long distance. . . . Hello, hello . . . oh . . . yes, this is she. . . . No, we haven't heard yet, Mrs. Harley; we're just sitting here waiting. Yes, I'll let you know . . . goodby. . . . There are some oranges on the dining room table, son.

More minutes of rocking . . . more minutes of waiting . . . more minutes of almost unbearable excitement and suspense. . . . Then . . . the telegram . . . torn open with nervous fingers . . . two kids who can't wait . . . more excitement for them than anybody else. Where are we going? . . . what kind o' gang of kids will we have to play with? . . . What is it, mother?

"There've sent your dad back another year! Thank goodness, now the old job of packing and moving and everything can wait for another year. . . . But I shouldn't say that . . . if they had wanted us to move, we would have been glad to go." The excitement dies.

And another year.

Now, boy, you talk about conferences—wait until you KNOW.

YANKEES ARE OPEN FOR DEALS

New York, December 3.—Miller Huggins, pilot of the world's champion New York Yankees, declared today that while he expected to stand pat on his present line-up for the 1924 campaign, he was open to any deal which might strengthen the club.

Huggins asserted he would bid for the services of Urban Shocker, St. Louis pitcher, if the Browns put him on the market, but declined to disclose what offer he might make. Huggins traded Shocker to St. Louis in 1918.

Waivers have been asked on Carl Mays, it was revealed by Huggins, who said that all American league clubs had waived, but three National league teams had filed claims for the "submarine" ball" twirler. It is possible the Yankees may arrange a deal which will send Mays to the senior circuit, where Huggins believes, he might regain his effectiveness.

The Yankee leader, who returned to New York today for the first time since the world's series, said he also was in the market for a right-handed hitting outfielder. The Yankees probably will train again at New Orleans, where they have conditioned for the past two years, Huggins intimated. He added, however, that San Antonio and Shreveport, La., were also being considered.

The Yankee pilot will attend the baseball meetings in Chicago next week and then go to St. Petersburg, Fla., for the winter.

Spring Games Are Arranged

St. Louis, Mo., December, 3.—The list of exhibition games scheduled by the St. Louis Americans for their 1924 spring training trip includes 16 games, all with minor league clubs. Several of the dates are tentative and in event that major league exhibition games are scheduled minor league teams will be dropped, it was explained.

The schedule includes eight games with the Mobile club beginning March 18 and ending April 1; games with Shreveport, April 3 and 4; with Dallas April 5 and 6; with Fort Worth April 7 and 8; and with Tulsa April 9 and 10. It is probable that the spring series between the Browns and local Nationals will open here April 12, it was added.

Covington Is Named Captain

Danville, Ky., December 3.—Herbert Covington, of Mayfield, Ky., was elected captain of the Centre football team for 1924 by unanimous voteo fh is teammates. Recognized as one of the south's greatest all-time broken field runners, Covington has been Centre's chief gridiron scorer the last two years, and during that time won places on the all-southern mythical eleven as quarterback.

Middies Look For Opponent

Annapolis, Md., December, 3.—If the University of California simply will not risk its prestige against the non-champion midshipmen of the United States Naval Academy, then the incipient sailors will be very glad of a chance to play the University of Washington.

The midshipmen are becoming nervous. As they have a date to play some representative western college team at the Tournament of Roses at Pasadena on New Year's Day and naturally will not be permitted to make the trip if no opponent can be found. Coach Bob Folwell returned to the academy Monday and gave the team a mild session of work, the first since the squad broke training after the Army game.

The athletic authorities of the academy are willing that the team should meet the University of Washington if California cannot be persuaded to reconsider the decision to decline the Navy's challenge. This would be a battle between a representative but not a champion team of the first rank in the East and a team of the same standing in the West.

PFANN IS LEADING SCORER OF COUNTRY

New York, December 3.—Captain George Pfann, of Cornell, with the most touchdowns and the greatest total of points; Sunny Sundstrom of the same college, with the most points after touchdown, and Captain Bill Mallory of Yale, with the most field goals, were the three leading scorers in their respective departments in eastern football in the season just ended.

Pfann made 15 touchdowns and booted eight points after touch down, but no field goals, for a total of 98 points, six more than Tryon of Colgate, Hazel of Rutgers and Nardacci of West Virginia, who tied for second place.

Cornell with 320 points led all eastern teams in scoring. It was the only team with more than 300 points.

West Virginia was second with 296.

BIG TRACK MEET TO BE HELD IN APRIL

Los Angeles, December 3.—The twelve fastest athletes in the country will compete for the world's sprint championship in a speed carnival to be held here in April, Robert S. Weaver, official of the local amateur athletic union, announced today.

Eugene Goodwillie, of Cornell, heralded as Charley Paddock's greatest rival, and Frank Hussey, the New York high school boy who ran the 100 yards in 9.3-5 seconds, will compete. Others who will run are: Loren Murchison, Illinois A. C.; A. J. Leconey, Lafayette; Leve:, Bernie Wefers and Farrel, New York A. C.; Albert Washington, Chicago high school boy; William Hayes, Boston A. A.; Ceasse, Illinois A. C., and Robert McAllister, the fleet-footed New York policeman.

It is also believed that Charlie Paddock will be able to run.

Race Schooner Sold.

Halifax, N. S., December 3.—Owners of the Blue Nose, whose skipper refused this fall to abide by the decision of the committee directing the International Fisherman's sailing race, have decided to sell the schooner.

Walters refused to resail a race after the racing committee held he had passed the wrong side of a buoy.

Doug Wycoff and Reeves Will Not Be Allowed To Try Out for Cage Team This Year

BY JOHN STAVON.

Officially, basket ball practice got under way yesterday afternoon, though the rain prevented the men from appearing in uniform. However, Coach Alexander called the squad together in his office and gave them an hour's lecture on the changes in the rules. He then advised all the candidates for the team to go to Spalding's and get a rule book.

Seventeen men have been furnished with uniforms, and from this number will no doubt come the varsity team. Most of the incoming men are from last year's freshman team. Of course all the letter men were out in force.

Tech is well fortified with letter men this year, and if previous experience is any criterion, Tech should have quite a nifty basket slinging bunch this season. "Baby" Roane is captain of the team, and will be an able leader. "Baby" has made his letter for three straight years in basket ball, and is recognized as one the best guards in the south. Indeed, he has been chosen as unanimous all-southern guard for the past two seasons.

Joe Eckford, alternate captain, will be back to stand guard over the pivot position. Dennicke and Mathewson, forwards on the team last year, will be back in position. Fred Moore and Roger Malone complete the list.

Not a man in that bunch who has less than two years' experience. Fred Moore is the only junior in the list, and he played a year's basket ball at the Macon "Y" before coming to Tech last fall a year ago. Fred entered Tech in 1920, but dropped out of school for a year at the end of his freshman year.

Practice is to be held each afternoon at 4 o'clock. Just now an effort is being made to secure a closed court for practice on wet and disagreeable days. So far this endeavor has not been accomplished, but it is hoped that within a few days a suitable part-time court will be found.

The freshmen will be forced to practice before the varsity each afternoon Tech is is exceedingly handicapped by not having a good court.

Wycoff and Reeves Are Barred.

Doug Wycoff, who made such a brilliant record at fullback, and Bob Reeves, who played varsity halfback, and who is one of the most dependable defensive men on the field, will not play basket ball this season.

Coach Alex decided that it would not be best for them to indulge in basket ball after such a strenuous football season.

Doug and Bob are both wonderful basket ball players, and would have developed into stars before leaving Tech, but it was best that neither play basket ball this year.

In the first place, both boys have earned a good rest, and they should take it. In the second place, there is an athletic ruling that an athlete is not allowed to sign out of classes but twice a year.

Both boys play baseball, and, in addition, will be called upon to attend spring football practice. In view of that fact, it was thought best to hold the remaining sign out privilege until spring for both Wycoff and Reeves.

Wycoff made a remarkable record this year, considering that he is only a sophomore. He was picked on practically every all-southern pick in the south. And, well he deserves it, and if he improves as he no doubt will do, just feature what a phenom he will be when his senior year comes around. They won't let him on the field by that time—he will be too good for them.

Navy Boxers To Box in New York

New York, December, 3.—The sailors of the Atlantic Scouting Fleet will fight their final bouts for the wrestling and boxing championship before the public this year in Madison Square Garden, the first time they have had a chance to show the taxpayers just how well they can handle themselves in man-to-man action.

Gloves are grooving the atmosphere even now on the decks of many ships and the music of the engines is accompanied by an overtone of creaking joints as the wrestlers go through their preliminaries. The winners of the preliminary events will be matched with the champions of last year in each class. Belts are only reward of the combatants.

The navy decided to make the finals a public show in order to stimulate interest in the men of the navy and fatten the athletic funds.

One super-dreadnaught, four battleships, five cruisers, 38 destroyers, 12 vessels of the train, four air squadron ships and two squadrons of aircraft comprise the scouting fleet whose thousands of gobs have been combed for the best athletes.

COMMITTEE WILL SELECT GRID OFFICIALS

Chicago, December 3.—(By the Associated Press.)—Selection of officials for 1924 western conference football games is to be taken out of the hands of the coaches and handled by a "Big Ten" committee similar to the system by which major league baseball umpires received assignments.

Professor Ralph W. Aigler, of the University of Michigan, and Professor B. J. Lambert, of the University of Iowa, together with Major John L. Griffith, commissioner of athletics, will form the committee to choose all the officials for all games. Chosen without reference to rival coaches, the officials, it is felt, will represent the authority of the Big Ten and disputes over rulings will be largely avoided.

PIE WAGON TAXI RUSHES MAGNATE TO BUSINESS DATE

Chicago, December 3.—John R. Thompson, millionaire chain restaurant magnate, came near being late for a directors' meeting Monday.

It was raining and no taxicab was to be had, when Thompson emerged from his office.

A few minutes later plutocrats in and about the stock exchange building, where the directors' session was to be held, were somewhat flabbergasted to see Thompson drive up to the exclusive portals in a pie wagon which had his name emblazoned in huge letters upon the side.

COOLIDGE NOT TO GO TO BORDER FOR OBREGON

Washington, December 3.—President Coolidge decided definitely against proposals that he make a trip to the Mexican border within the next few months to meet President Obregon of Mexico.

Several factors are understood to have actuated Mr. Coolidge in making the decision. Among these is the desire to remain in Washington almost constantly during the session of congress; the belief that such a trip could not be made without acceptance of numerous invitations to deliver addresses which would make the time required for such a trip quite long, and the opposition to any move by the United States that could be interpreted as interference in the political campaign now in progress in Mexico.

MONROE DOCTRINE NEED IS PASSING

Richmond, Va., December 3.—Belief that the time is approaching when the application of the Monroe doctrine would be looked upon more as a subject of historical interest than as a problem of high concern was expressed tonight by Ricardo J. Alfaro, minister of Panama to the United States, speaking at the centennial celebration of the Monroe doctrine held here under the auspices of the Southern Commercial congress.

"With the growing stability, political as well as financial, of the southern nations," said Dr. Alfaro, "with the increase of continental solidarity and the tightening of trade and intellectual bonds between Latin-Americans and Anglo-Americans; with the consolidation of the United States as a great power whose attitude is decisive as to the momentous questions of the world, . . . there is every hope that within a few decades no more cases will arise when an enforcement of the principles laid down in 1823 will be necessary, or where the same may be wrongfully involved for any purpose.

Principle Will Live.

"When that day shall have arrived, the principle will continue to live, but the problems will cease to exist."

Today, the second day of the celebration which began yesterday afternoon with a solemn procession to the tomb of James Monroe, in Hollywood cemetery, where eulogies were said and flowers were banked about the grave of the fifth president of the republic, descendants of the author of the doctrine of American primacy in the western hemisphere were presented to the delegates at the morning session. Miss Mary Boyce Temple, of Knoxville, Tenn., president of the women's auxiliary of the Southern Commercial congress, introduced the descendants, 21 in number. The response as made by Mrs. Rose Gouverneur Hoes, of Washington, president of the Society of the Descendants of James Monroe.

Lady Astor Sends Message.

An interesting feature of today's session was a message from Lady Nancy Astor, a native Virginian, who is fighting to retain her seat in the British house of commons.

"The way of true progress does not lie in despising the past," wrote Lady Astor, "nor in ignoring the lessons of the past, but in being loyal to the past in the light of present and future needs.

"Our forefathers had great and bold ideals for the south, and it is in being faithful to the spirit of their love for the south that we can most worthily commemorate them.

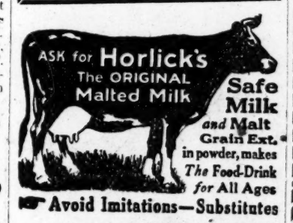

"I do especially believe that the women of the south have great traditions of courage and service to fulfill."

Features Which Will Interest Every Woman

Pola Negri As Spanish Dancer Will Appear at Movie Ball

Pola Negri as a Spanish dancer will be a feature of the brilliant movie ball at the Piedmont Driving club Wednesday evening. In an enchanting Spanish costume, a beautiful and talented Atlanta girl will represent this screen favorite in a dance which will open the program of the entertainment features.

"Past One at Rooney's," a delightful comedy, will follow. Then will appear Peggy Hopkins Joyce in a marvelous costume. Zaza, famous in pictures and opera, will be seen in a wonderful gown. Mr. and Mrs. Rudolph Valentino will dance the Argentine tango, and as a brilliant climax, Anne Pennington, of the Ziegfeld Follies, will dance in her inimitable manner.

Taking their cue from the program in which famous stars will appear, Atlanta society girls and men will attend the ball gowned to represent their favorite screen stars.

Beautiful Costumes.

Miss Sue Bucknell will appear as Constance Talmage in "East Is West."

Miss Pauline DeGive will be gowned as Florence Walton.

Miss Margaret White will portray Claire Windsor.

Miss Carrie Lou Reynolds will be seen as Eleanor Boardman.

Miss Majorie Davidson will be costumed to represent Billie Burke.

Miss Mary Jimmie Pattillo will go as a Chinese girl.

Miss Maria Brown will represent a Gypsy girl.

Mrs. Harold Rogers will be seen as a skating girl.

Mrs. Veazy Rainwater will represent Norma Talmadge in "Smilin' Through."

Mrs. William McKenzie and Mrs. Clifford Hatcher will go as two Gaby dolls from Paris.

Mrs. Henry Newman will represent "Sweet Nell of Old Drury."

William McKenzie and L. G. Robinson will appear as Jackie Coogan in "Long Live the King."

Others who will wear lovely costumes will be Mrs. Robert White, Mrs. Allen Carroll Love, Mrs. Lynn Walker, Miss Catherine Murphy, Miss Constance Cone, Miss Frances Brown, Miss Virginia Maude, Miss Jeannette Collings, Mrs. James D. Robinson, Kenneth McMillan and Ted Miller.

After the program supper will be served, which will be followed by the grand march of all actors, actresses and guests who are in costume. A beautiful prize will be awarded to the lady wearing the best costume, and also one to the gentleman whose costume is most perfect. These prizes have been selected with great care and are very valuable.

Carnival will break loose after the awarding of the prizes and the rest of the evening will be spent in general dancing with several favor numbers.

One of the events will be the balloon feature at which time over 500 balloons will be turned loose in the ball room.

For Berry Schools.

The ball will be given for the benefit of the Martha Berry schools at Rome.

The ball will be sponsored by a group of society matrons who have pledged their support towards building this hall, and the cost of each ticket is $3. Many of the invitations have gone astray, but those who desire to attend are requested to apply to Mrs. James D. Robinson and her committee who will be stationed all day Tuesday at the Atlanta National bank, the Capital City club, Piedmont Driving club, Myron Freeman & Co. and Druid Hills Golf club.

General Chairman.

Mrs. Frank Ellis is general manager for the ball and Warner's Seven Aces wil furnish the music for dancing. Mrs. Ellis urges everybody to attend in costume in order to make the ball more brilliant, but states that if others find it impossible to appear in costume, evening dress will be acceptable. Supper served at 11:30 o'clock has been included in the price of each admission ticket. A favor of distinction for everyone attending, first prizes for the lady and gentleman best portraying cinema actress or actor, are other benefits which have materialized in the hours succeeding that of plans first announced.

Mrs. Frank S. Ellis and the committee in charge of details stress especially the fact that the first price of admission tickets to the ball is the only possible expenditure of those attending, as nothing will be sold.

More than 1,000 invitations were issued, each invitation carrying with it the privilege of each recipient to bring as many guests as desired.

Mrs. Preston S. Arkwright and Mrs. William D. Ellis, Jr., chairmen of the committee of society girls who have been making exquisite favors for the ball for the past two weeks, announce the completion of hundreds of these favors.

Mrs. Charles E. Sciple is chairman of decorations and the club ballroom will be transformed into a wonderful scene.

Dugald Walker Will Present 'Invisible Village' This Morning

Dugald Walker, will present the "Invisible Village" to his grown-up audience this morning at 11 o'clock, at the home of Mrs. Frank S. Ellis, 1 Peachtree circle, under the auspices of the Fine Arts club.

Mr. Walker was born in Virginia and he has never forgotten the stories of elfland told him by negro mammies. He is about 35 years old and he illustrates his stories with pictures of real fairies, brownies, elves and pixies. He has seen these fleeting creatures with his own eyes and has pictured them as he has really seen them. He makes his audience believe in fairies and a talk with this idealistic man will convince one that there is a magic country of fairies. His message is of the immortal spirit of play and happiness.

Mr. Walker's retreat in New York is a large glass inclosed studio overlooking one of the city's noisy, dusty streets. One can sense the presence of wood spirits and ocean pixies in this wonderful room. The studio contains interesting souvenirs from here, there and everywhere, as well as the many exquisite paintings and drawings of the well-known books he has so charmingly illustrated.

Mr. Walker says, "If you leave two children together for an hour, even two children of widely different cast, they promptly decide that they love each other devotedly. Children bear no dislike toward anything unless we grown-ups, either consciously or unconsciously, instill in them a germ of friction or antipathy. These traits are distinctly a product of later years, and this is just as true as is the fact that children's minds refuse nothing we give them, and it rests with us to give them beauty and understanding, rather than material values. A discarded spool, its bright silk run off, will give a tiny tot as great delight as some expensive and promptly broken toy."

LISTENING IN ON WOMEN

THEIR WORK FOR THE BLIND

BY LOUISE DOOLY

To this tourist country, colorful now with the richness of early autumn, scarcely a day goes by that does not bring its interesting, or even distinguished visitors.

At one time it is the Laird of Lochiel, leader of the Clara Cameron, with his lady. At another maybe it is a composer of music, which might of itself reveal its creator's romantic origin, even if her curly Titian wave, her keen, sparkling eyes, her many mannerisms, but more than all, her name—Mana Zucca—did not tell of the Hungarian strain which characterizes the work which has put her to the front among composers in America.

Perhaps another day it is the governor of Georgia come to study North Carolina's tax system, or the governor of Tennessee to learn at firsthand of the splendid roads his neighbor state can boast, and then to goad his own state to do likewise.

But this little story intends to tell of leadership in quite a different line from all these others. It is that of Mrs. Gertrude T. Rider, whose picture appears herewith, and whose visit in Asheville not long ago called the attention of the writer to what Mrs. Rider is doing for the blind in her dual capacity as librarian for the blind library of congress, and, as national advisor on Braille for the American Red Cross. Some incidents of Mrs. Rider's narrative indicated, too, that other women in the south are as ignorant as the present writer was of what is being done and how much more could be done for the ex-service man who lost his sight fighting, and for all that other army of the blind who have not this same appeal to sentiment.

Mrs. Rider is a type of women to make the interviewer very soon say to herself: "Here is one who knows what she is about and who has the ability, moreover, to get things done."

She has studied methods of teaching Braille and providing books for the blind in the best institutions in Europe. She is using the modern American library system to distribute these books where they wil do the most good, and to encourage the blind to use the congressional library.

Through the Red Cross she is directing the work of getting the books made which are to be thus circulated.

The most striking revelation she made is that more than four hundred women in the United States are giving their services in the making of the Braille books which are used both for the ex-service men, blinded in the war, and for the blind in general.

Significant and embarrassing to the women of the southeastern states, however, is the fact that of these several hundred volunteers, only one woman in all these southeastern states is thus at work.

Mds. Victor Cluis, of Atlanta, director of volunteer service, southern division of the Red Cross, supplied this last information, with the added fact that this one lone volunteer is a North Carolinian, Miss Julia Wheeler, of Hickory.

"Once a woman takes up the transcribing of Braille," declared Mrs. Rider, "she scarcely ever gives it up, unless because of illness or pressing duties. I heard a Philadelphia woman say that transcribing was as fascinating to her as Mah Jonng, while many of our regular transcribers even take the work with them when they go on summer jaunts. They can get in a great deal ot odd hours."

Concerning the method of proceedure, Mrs. Rider explained that in some cases a local chapter of the Red Cross undertakes Braille as part of its program of work, and then secures volunteers among the chapter membership. In many other cases, the individual woman, attracted by the work and the purpose behind it, learns the art through the correspondence method directly from Red Cross headquarters or the congressional library.

Of the 1,395 Braille books in the library at Evergreen in Maryland, the Red Cross Institute for the training of blinded ex-service men, 822 are hand-copied, the work of volunteers all over the country, while the traveling library conducted by the library of congress, Mrs. Rider's department, is also made up largely of volumes done by volunteer transcribers.

"The paid work is tremendously expensive," states Mrs. Rider, "and nowhere have funds yet been made available to supply any adequate number of Braille books, even for the needs of ex-service men. The government has appropriated $100,000 for Braille books, but when it is stated that this amount will Braille only 65 or 75 volumes, some idea can be gained of the value that lies in the volunteer labor.

"An appealing feature of the volunteer work," said Mrs. Rider, "is that the transcriber may choose the book she wishes to reproduce, provided it meets with the approval of the congressional library or the Red Cross distributors, but most of the volunteers prefer to work on whatever kind of volume the distributors find they have most demand for. Sometimes this is fiction. Sometimes technical works are the greatest need. Sometimes it is history or philosophy.

"There are three ways of producing Braille," Mrs. Rider explained. "It may be written by hand, one dot at a time, with a slate and stylus; it may be produced on a Braille writer where an entire character can be made at a single stroke; or it may be embossed on brass plates from which many paper impressions can be made with a printing press. The last is obviously the best way, but it is also very expensive. It costs $5 a 1,000 words to stereotype the metal plates, after which there is the expense of embossing the paper sheets and binding them.

"'Penrod,' by Booth Tarkington, was brailled at an expense of over $300. The price of embossing 'Love Series,' by Mary Roberts Rinehart, was about $400. In both cases the authors themselves financed the work.

"Dots produced by hand, either with slate or writer, are quite as satisfactory as those made by machinery. Writers now cost $32, and an expert can transcribe six pages an hour. With practice on the slate one may write four pages an hour. The slate has the advantage of being inexpensive ($1.90) and easily carried about. The only disadvantage to hand work is the fact that only a single copy can be made at a time."

"It is remarkable," said Mrs. Rider, "how volunteers have mastered the intricacies of Braille, accepted criticism, profiting by it until the books copied by them would do credit to any printing house.

"The blinded soldier has also been a surprise in many ways. None more than in the facility with which he has learned to read, and his eagerness for books.

"Rapid readers soon exhaust the supply of books and ask for more, and a hand-copied book will last for years if done on suitable paper and properly shellacked. 'Westward Ho!' by Charles Kingsley, transcribed for the library of congress over 17 years ago, has just been removed from circulation because the corners of the pages are deeply broken. The dots are still perfectly good.

"What the volunteer has done for the war blind is needed also for the civilian blind. Because of the great cost and the need of small editions, Braille printing can never be done on a commercial basis. Unless a vast endowment is forthcoming, these wants will never be met save by the volunteer copyist."

Inquiry from Mrs. Victor Cluis reveals the fact that Atlanta chapter, Red Cross, plans in the immediate future to sound out the willingness of Atlanta women to take up Braille, this to be handled by the women's organizations as part of their service program.

The individual woman in Atlanta or the south, however, who would care to take up transcribing "on her own" may learn all the details through Mrs. Cluis,

Asheville, N. C.

Through Miss Marian Stearns of the Junior League of Atlanta, Atlanta chapter, American Red Cross, has recently started a class of 20 in Braille. Two transcribers have also come to Atlanta from other cities for temporary residence.

Dr. Loveridge Will Lecture Today On "Silence"

"Silence" or "Finding God" will be the subject of the third lecture in the series of lectures being given by Dr. Blanche Grosbec Loveridge in the Ansley Hotel roof garden each Tuesday morning at 11 o'clock. The present series is the third sponsored by the Atlanta Federation of Women's clubs, and was decided upon by Mrs. T. T. Stevens, president of the federation, in response to the expressed desire of the majority of clubwomen who had attended the first two series. The lectures are given for the benefit of Tallulah Falls Industrial School, and the first two series resulted in the founding of two perpetual scholarships at the school, and named in honor of the two founders of the Atlanta federation, Mrs. W. P. Pattillo and Mrs. Julius Brown.

Dr. Loveridge will present the scientific side of the psychological effect of silence as employed by the individual upon the individual's own personality. Study in psychological laboratories has revealed that silence within the mind and soul of the individual has to be consciously sought and whenever obtained may be used for curative purposes and for greatly increasing mental power.

"In past ages," according to Dr. Loveridge, "the power of silent contemplation was regularly employed by all great teachers and leaders, particularly the great Christian preachers, but without attempt to analyze its operations. Of late years universities and scientific students have devoted careful attention to the cause and effect and to attaining at will inner silence, with the result that many facts are now exactly measured and tabulated, making it possible to transfer this knowledge to daily practice by anybody with sufficient determination to employ it."

Mrs. Spencer Atkinson, chairman of arrangements for the lectures, announces that Dr. Loveridge's remaining lectures will be given in the Ansley roof garden in order to accommodate the large audience which gathers for each lecture. Comfort and sufficient space are assured those who attend Tuesday. Tickets are $2.00 for four lectures of four admissions, 75 cents for single admissions to each lecture.

BY ELIZABETH JORDAN

"No one goes there, signorina," she said.

"Of course not. Why should anyone?"

"The signorina will do well to forget the old corridor," Bianca muttered, and ended in a lower tone, "It is an evil place!"

The door clicked shut behind her. Valerie stared at it a moment, then smilingly relaxed with the reflection that Italians were almost too temperamental for our northern climes. This, no doubt, was precisely the sort of thing that had forced Gordon to post warning bulletins in the servants' quarters.

Miss Knight's instinctive prejudice against Bianca was strengthened by the maid's manner an hour later when, without being summoned, she tapped at Valerie's door to ask if she could be of use to the signorina in dressing for dinner. Signorina Sterling, she explained, was already dressed. The signorina who was putting the finishing touches to her own toilet, declined the offer appreciatively but firmly. Bianca smiled.

"The signorina needs no help," she admitted. "When I look upon most ladies I have the desire to change—to add here, to take away there, to give this little touch or that. But I look upon the signorina and my soul is satisfied. To alter but the slightest detail would be to destroy what is perfect."

"That is nice of you, Bianca," Valerie cheerfully told her. "And I know it comes from an expert, for you make a charming picture of the Signora Chopin."

Bianca darkly shook her head, her manner conveying many things.

"The Signora Chapin will not be at dinner tonight," she said, appreciatively watching the arrangement of a heavy dull jet comb in the guest's beautiful hair. "She is much upset what happened at luncheon today."

For a moment, so remote seemed that slight episode, Valerie did not catch the connection. Then she said indifferently: "Oh, you mean Miss Genevieve—"

She stopped in surprise. Bianca was crossing herself, and the hand she used shook visibly.

"Signorina!"—the word was an imploring whisper—"I beg of you, do not mention that child."

The guest's reaction was a pang of sympathy for Gordon—the second she had experienced. She was beginning to realize the conditions he had to contend with.

"You may go now, Bianca," she said coldly.

The woman flushed and started toward the door. There she stopped.

"The signorina is displeased," she muttered, sullenly. But she will discover I am right. That child"—again her voice dropped—"is possessed by an evil spirit. But it is not permitted to say so. Hawes said it yesterday, and tonight he is gone."

Once more the door closed behind her, and Valerie, her sense of well-being now rudely disturbed, sat gazing thoughtfully into the mirror of her dressing tables. She had been at Pentlands about twenty-four hours, and her first impression on entering it had been of its peace and harmony as well as of its beauty. Yet already, thanks largely to the chatter of a servant, she was feeling its turbulent undercurrents. What did they amount to? Nothing, surely. It was, it must be merely the breath of servants that was disturbing these quiet waters. Evidently Gordon realized this. He was taking the situation in hand. Also he was acting promptly. He had lost not time in getting rid of Hawes—doubtless Valerie remembered, because of his little son's passionate revelation in the dining room: "Hawes says there's devils here!" Remembering the pink, boyish face and pleasant smile of Hawes, Valerie found herself regretting the lad's departure. He had been a rather nice bit of youth around the place. And if she meant to stay—

She caught her breath, held motionless by the vividness with which that unfinished thought had flashed into her mind. If she meant to stay. Was it possible that, subconsciously at least, she was seriously considering Gordon's proposition? Consciously she had refused to do so, stationing a guard at the entrance of her mind, blocking on the instant the least memory of that morning talk, reminding Valerie Knight that in self-respect she could not give even a second's reflection to this mad plan. And all the time, deep within her, something was quietly checking off each incident of her visit, every impression she received, weighing it, watching it swing this way or that way the balance of the scales she held. She admitted now that she was holding them—that she was considering her host's amazing plan.

She became conscious that she was still sitting motionless, her lower lip between her teeth, her slippered foot absently tapping the ground. Slowly she nodded. She was considering that offer! All right, then, let her continue to consider it. The one reflection that could bolster up her pride hastened to present itself. At least she had not yet decided! If there was comfort in that, she grimly told herself, let her find it. There was. She threw back her head with the quick gesture Gordon had observed that morning and with an ironic smile at her own expense she switched off the lights and went downstairs to dinner.

The meal was a quiet one. McTavish augustly served it, assisted by the maid of whom Anne had caught a distant glimpse the night before, and who was so overcome by the responsibilities of her new role that her hands shook pathetically every time they came into view.

After dinner Gordon put a tacit veto on music by suggesting bridge. Miss Knight welcomed the change. She did not care to listen to music. It never lured her from one mental condition to another, as it does most hearers, but, instead, merely intensified any mood she happened to be in. She did not wish her present mood intensified, and she put her mind on bridge with results that deeply gratified Perry, who was her partner.

"You play a ripping game!" was his admiring comment as he drew in her tricks and recorded a grand slam on a no trump bid. "And you'd have lost three tricks if you hadn't played exactly as you did."

"I do play rather well," Valerie admitted, and added, thoughtfully, "I wonder if I could get up some classes?"

Gordon shook his head as he began to deal.

"That sort of thing is too uncertain," he said. "Women take a few lessons and then leave for Palm Beach or California. Bridge teachers have a tragic time of it."

He spoke with the authority of one who has a right to speak, and Valerie resented that attitude. She snubbed him instantly and without compunction. Looking past his profile as if it were not present, she addressed Anne and Perry.

The Best Cough Syrup is Home-made.

Here's an easy way to save $2, and yet have the best cough remedy you ever tried.

You've probably heard of this well-known plan of making cough syrup at home. But have you ever used it? Thousands of families, the world over, feel that they could hardly keep house without it. It's simple and cheap, but the way it takes hold of a cough will soon earn it a permanent place in your home.

Into a pint bottle, pour 2½ ounces of Pinex; then add plain granulated sugar syrup to fill up the pint. Or, if desired, use clarified molasses, honey, or corn syrup, instead of sugar syrup. Either way, it tastes good, never spoils, and gives you a full pint of better cough remedy than you could buy ready-made for three times its cost.

It is really wonderful how quickly this home-made remedy conquers a cough—usually in 24 hours or less. It seems to penetrate through every air passage, loosens a dry, hoarse or tight cough, lifts the phlegm, heals the membranes, and gives almost immediate relief. Splendid for throat tickle, hoarseness, croup, bronchitis and bronchial asthma.

Pinex is a highly concentrated compound of genuine Norway pine extract, and has been used for generations for throat and chest ailments.

To avoid disappointment ask your druggist for "2½ ounces of Pinex" with directions, and don't accept anything else. Guaranteed to give absolute satisfaction or money refunded. The Pinex Co., Ft. Wayne, Ind.

STARVED HEARTS

BY MILDRED BARBOUR

A LADY LECTURER.

Afterward, Madelon looked back on the year that followed as twelve months cut out of her life.

Sometimes she was tempted to give up the struggle, to sink down into the slough of complete and utter hopelessness, to let the outside world revolve unnoticed while she remained lulled in the lethargy of indifference.

But at such times memory of her duty to Barbara gave renewed strength, and she fought on stubbornly, unceasingly for the childhood rights of little Stephen.

Lane, much as he loved the child, was becoming impatient with him.

"He ought to learn more quickly," he would declare fumingly. "I don't want a ninny for a son."

"But he is so young," Madelon pleaded. "Give him time. He's only a baby yet, really."

"Baby fiddlesticks! At his age, I could read and write and do sums in arithmetic."

"But you were always phenomenal, Uncle Stephen," was her demure reply.

Anger swelled in Madelons breast.

"How can you say that of Barbara?" she cried hotly.

"Beauty and brains are a rare combination—too rare even to search for," he replied. "I shall know better next time."

Madelon stared at him incredulously.

He brushed aside her question impatiently.

"Some day perhaps. I want children, many children. I have money to educate them. I have a brain to pass on to them. I can give them advantages that princes might envy. It is my duty to have children."

Madelon was too amazed for reply. That Lane might contemplate remarriage had never occurred to her. She considered him an old man.

She had a sudden blinding vision of freedom. Suppose he did remarry? Would it not dissolve her obligations?

She was still pondering of the possibilities of the future when she went out to the cemetery that afternoon to carry roses to Barbara's grave.

The late afternoon sun was slanting across the carefully tended grass. The slender marble column that sprang heavenward was golden in its rays. A willow tree not far away stirred the green lace of its foliage in the summer breeze.

Madelon felt that she had never looked on a scene so peaceful.

She laid the roses, the sunset roses that Barbara had loved, at the foot of the marble column.

How soon men forget, she pondered. Barbara's white beauty was scarcely dust, before Lane spoke of another wife. In one short year, the memory of Barbara had grown dim.

Unbidden, the thought of Howard Chandler came to her. She felt a sudden compunction at her own heartlessness.

Had she the moral right to censure Lane when the passing of her own husband was blotted so quickly from her consciousness?

She closed her eyes. She sould see the blue skies of Hawaii that looked down on his last resting place. The tropic sun would be shining warmly and the trade wind would stir the long grasses on the mountainside. Poinsettia, hibiscus, wild flowers of the mountain, would be rioting over the spot where he slept.

Some day she would go back to see that everything was carefully tended. She could imagine the mocking smile that would curve his lips if he knew.

"Can you come over and dine with me? I've got a lady lecturer in tow. The hospital board wished her on me for dinner, and I'm being snowed under with abundant intellectuality. Please heed my S. O. S."

Madelon promised laughingly. Lane was not dining at home, else she could not have accepted.

Ann and her guest were in the living room when the maid admitted her. While she disposed of her wrap and glanced critically at her coiffure, she could hear a soft purring voice carrying on a monologue in the other room.

She glanced enquiringly at Ann's trim maid.

The girl giggled.

"She's funny. She ain't stopped talking since she came this afternoon."

When Madelon entered the room the guest chillingly became silent long enough to acknowledge the introduction. Ann presented her as "Miss Maitland." She bowed graciously; then resumed her interrupted discourse.

It gave Madelon opportunity to look at her.

She was tall and rather more than generously proportioned, a veritable Juno of a woman. Her face was intellectual rather than handsome. But the most striking thing about her has her soft, purring voice. It had a curious magnetic quality.

For some unknown reason, Madelon felt an instinctive dislike of her out of all proportion to the brevity of their meeting.

YARBROUGH ON TRIAL AGAIN FOR FLOGGINGS

Macon, Ga., December 3.—Following the completion of the jury, the taking of testimony in the trial of C. A. Yarbrough, Macon dentist, charged with rioting in connection with the flogging of W. C. Barnett, Macon harness shop operator, on February 27, 1923, began in the city court shortly after 12 o'clock today. A large number of jurymen disqualified for cause. Two panels of jurors consisting of twenty-four each, were exhausted in selecting the jury, both sides taking all the strikes allotted them under the law.

Barnett was the first witness to take the stand. He testified that he was at his place of business on the night of February 27, when a strange man reported to him that one of his children had been hurt in an auto accident and that he was wanted at home. He said he closed his shop and went outside and got into a waiting automobile containing three men, and was driven away.

He testified, not far from home he was seived by men on either side of him and handcuffed and then blindfolded. He was driven out in the country not far from town where he was taken out and flogged. He identified Dr. Yarbrough as one of the men in the car and as the man who lashed him. He was left in the woods to walk home, he said.

Some time after the flogging, he said he saw Dr. Yarbrough in a local drug store and recognized him. He reported the matter and the arrest was made.

The trial will continue into Tuesday but likely will be finished by noon.

Would Annul Marriage Of 16-Year-Old Youth To Rich Widow, Aged 46

Jersey City, N. J., December 3.—Investigation of the legality of the marriage of Burton S. Tucker, 16-year-old son of Postmaster Joseph Tucker, of South Essex, Mass., to the former Mrs. Susan O. Simpson, wealthy 46-year-old widow of New York City, was started by the Hudson county prosecutor's office today. The investigation was requested by the boy's parents, who seek an annulment on the ground that he is below legal age and that he had falsely obtained the license by giving his age as 21.

The prosecutor's office said it had learned that the marriage was performed before the lapse of the 72 hours required by New Jersey law as an interim between the obtaining of a license and the performance of the ceremony. The law, however, makes an exception in the case of emergencies, and it was indicated by the prosecutor's office that an emergency ruled the marriage of the couple.

What Will You Do With Your Street Railway?

An Invitation to the People of Atlanta to Solve the Transportation Problem

PETITION

TO THE MAYOR AND GENERAL COUNCIL OF THE CITY OF ATLANTA:

FOLLOWING up the petition of this Company of May 11th, 1923, certain additional facts and a concrete proposition designed to put the street railroad transportation of the City of Atlanta on a living basis are now presented in this second petition.

Street car transportation is a Public necessity. The Public, acting through the State Government, fixes the rates for street car transportation and the character of service rendered in the City of Atlanta. It fixes all the vital conditions under which the business is conducted. No route, no schedule, no car stop can be changed, nor any other essential operating condition or rule changed without the approval of the people through their representatives. The wages paid the street railroad employes were fixed by Public arbitration. So the street railroad business must be and is conducted under conditions and rules fixed by the Public through its representatives. The street railroad is practically powerless to inaugurate any change which in its judgment is necessary either to increase its revenue or to lessen the cost of the service.

During the year 1922 the street railroad failed by Five Hundred Sixty-Five Thousand, Five Hundred Thirty-six Dollars and Twenty-nine Cents ($565,536.29) to earn eight per cent (8%) (allowed by the Public Service Commission as a reasonable return) on the minimum pre-war valuation of the street railroad property fixed by the Public Service Commission. This loss has increased yearly. For the nine months of the present year ending September 30th the loss has been greater than for any corresponding period; net earnings for that period having been at the rate of only three and one-half per cent (3½%) per annum on the Public Service Commission's (minimum pre-war) valuation of the street railway property.

If present conditions continue there will shortly be no margin at all left after operating expenses are paid, and the ability of the street railroad to maintain the present transportation service will be ended, a condition which has never before existed in Atlanta, and which can be prevented by the plan submitted in this petition.

Credit Is Exhausted

But already, owing to the financial results stated above, the credit of the street railway is now exhausted, and not one dollar of additional capital can be borrowed either for the purpose of improving the existing mileage or for extensions. This serious condition jeopardizes the quality of the present service as well as its continued existence.

The petition of May 11th, 1923, clearly and explicitly explained these conditions and stated what would result if they continued, and to correct them asked for the cooperation of the City and Public in two particulars, namely:

(1) Regulation of jitneys by vigorous enforcement of existing laws and the passage and enforcement of all regulation necessary to prevent unfair competition.

(2) Rigid enforcement of proper regulation of street traffic.

To show the continued efforts of the street railroad to give more and better service, and as an evidence of its good faith at the very time it asked co-operation of the City and Public, the petition stated the definite plans then being carried out for increasing and improving the street railroad service, as follows:

(1) General improvement in track, cars and electric system designed to speed up the cars, increase and improve the service.

(2) Organization of a system of bus transportation to supplement the street railroad transportation system.

(3) Increased sale and use of tickets by the sale of three (3) for twenty (20) cents.

Subsequent to consideration of the petition of May 11th, 1923, during which Public hearings were held, the City passed an ordinance putting jitneys under bond.

The City also renewed its efforts to regulate street traffic.

Since this action by the City the street railroad has proceeded with the physical improvements to the street railway system, and the additions and improvements listed in the detailed schedule attached to its petition of May 11th, 1923, will be ninety per cent (90%) completed by the end of the present year.

The street railroad has studied bus transportation and is ready to begin that service where needed under the terms of this petition,

The street railroad has put into effect the sale of three (3) tickets for twenty (20) cents.

The bonding of jitneys and the efforts of the City Government to regulate traffic have resulted in little or no improvement in the conditions presented in the petition of May 11, 1923.

Definite Remedies Suggested

So that the street railroad may be able in future as in the past to furnish the service which the Public requires, this, its second petition, now asks the City Government and the Public to approve, only to the extent necessary to put it on a living basis, certain definite changes in the conditions under which the street railroad is now operating as follows:

(1) Complete elimination of jitneys from streets upon which street cars are operated.
(2) Renewed and effective enforcement of regulation of street traffic.
(3) Ten-cent (10c) cash fare on street cars; tickets to be sold at the present rate of six and two-thirds cents (6 2-3c). Car riders will pay no increase in fare if they buy tickets.
(4) Two-cent (2c) charge for transfers.
(5) Reasonable revision in the operating routes of the cars in the interest of more efficient operation.
(6) Elimination of unnecessary car stops to effect quicker street railroad service.
(7) Relief to the extent necessary from paving charges and gross receipts taxes.

The above changes, only to the extent necessary, are asked for the purpose of putting and keeping the street railroad on a living basis in the interest of the Public and as a simple act of justice to the owners who built and paid for the system.

What Company Will Do

If the City and Public grant its petition the street railroad will—

(1) Submit its books, records and accounts to any fair audit and pay the cost of the same in order that its statements may be verified.

(2) Negotiate an agreement between the City, representing the Public, and the street railroad as to what constitutes a living basis and thereafter will operate the street railroad system and busses in co-ordination to the extent necessary to accommodate the traffic under proper supervision of the Public and Public Service Commission as efficiently and economically as possible, and will extend and improve the service to the extent its revenue and credit permit, as trustee for the Public.

(3) Agree to any fair conditions of continuous supervision, representation or auditing the Public desires or deems necessary to secure proper administration of the plan agreed to.

(4) Agree to maintain the service at the highest standard under the lowest rate of fare that will support it on the living basis agreed to.

Reasons for Remedies Sought

The reasons for the specific remedies asked for in this petition have been continually presented to the Public throughout the year 1923. But a brief summary of the grounds for the specific requests may be useful at this time.

(1) Jitney competition is unfair. It will for that reason if continued subject the street railroad to such losses that it will be forced to discontinue operation, and the Public will thereby lose the permanent transportation upon which it must depend. Actual experience throughout the country has shown that street cars and jitneys cannot both exist in direct competition with each other on the same streets. Wherever this problem has arisen the necessity for rail transportation has been demonstrated because there is no way by which it is possible to conduct mass transportation except upon rails. To permit the licensing of jitney busses to run alongside the street railway tracks and pick up the cream of the traffic is contrary to every permanent Public interest. Jitneys should not be licensed except where necessity for them is shown. The street railway tracks have been built at enormous cost under franchise from the City and the City owes the street railroad, to which it has granted its franchise, protection from unfair competition.

Everyone Would Benefit

(2) Enforcement of proper regulation of street traffic is in the interest of all elements of the Public. There is not a single citizen of the City who would not be benefited by effective traffic regulation; because real traffic regulation would save valuable lives almost daily; because the money value of time saved would run into millions of dollars; because the commerce of the City would be speeded up, would follow natural channels, and would be greatly increased; because the more than forty-seven (47) average passengers per street car in the rush hour would receive the proportionate consideration to which they are entitled in comparison with the one average passenger per automobile (without driver); because the two hundred and seventy thousand (270,000) daily street car riders, who include the thrifty workers of the City, would no longer lose so great a part of their time and be so greatly inconvenienced.

(3) Ten-cent (10c) cash fare is asked because the cost of furnishing street car transportation service has more than doubled since 1914. Tickets to be sold at the present rate of six and two-thirds cents (6 2-3c). CAR RIDERS WILL PAY NO INCREASE IN FARE IF THEY BUY TICKETS.

In the Interest of Good Service

(4) Two-cent (2c) charge for transfers also is asked because the cost of furnishing the service has more than doubled. No service should be furnished free. Free service can only be furnished at the cost of those passengers who pay fares. A charge for transfers will also help to prevent their misuse because if sold as tickets they can and will be more exactly checked. Misuse of transfers is at the expense of those who pay fares.

(5) The management responsible for the results should be given reasonable latitude in changing the operation of the routes of cars in the interest of good service.

(6) The management responsible for results should be given reasonable authority in eliminating unnecessary car stops. The car stops in Atlanta are unnecessarily frequent and prevent quick reliable schedules and increase the cost of the service.

Taxes on Car Riders

(7) All the many different kinds of taxes assessed against and paid by the street railroad are indirect taxes levied on the car riders, because the only money the street railroad receives with which to pay the taxes comes from the fares paid by passengers. So the street railroad in 1922 collected $458,160.72 from its passengers and paid it over in taxes (including paving assessments) to State, County and City. It acted as Tax Collector. None of that money was available to pay the costs of transportation, though that was what the passengers paid it to get. Most of it went into the general tax funds; some of it was used to pave streets. The law regulating street railroads is that they are entitled to a fare that will pay all operating costs, all taxes, and a reasonable return on the present fair value of the street railroad property. If street railroad taxes are increased the street car fare must be increased by the same amount to get the money to pay the tax increase. So street car riders, when they pay their fares, are a class paying special taxes which are used for the benefit of the entire public, including automobile owners who wear out the pavements the street car riders are taxed to pay for, and who are not taxed on a similar basis. The entire sum realized from car fares (except taxes assessed on the same basis as on everybody else) should be available and used to furnish and pay for street car transportation. Street railroad property should be taxed only on an equal basis with all other property. Why should street car passengers be required to pay a large sum yearly to pave streets in which they have no interest and which they do not even use? The electric street railroad does not need paved streets. It can operate just as well where there are no pavements. Unlike the automobile, the electric street railroad does not use the pavements at all. In the days of horse cars the horses actually wore out the pavements, and for that reason paving costs were assessed against the street railroads. The car riders, of whom there are on an average of over 270,000 every day, should understand that these special paving taxes and all increased street railroad taxes necessarily increase street railroad fares. The present many kinds of and excessive street railroad taxes are a relic of the long past period when street railroads were privately owned and managed without Public supervision or regulation. Now, when strict State regulation limits the profit and fixes the fare to meet the cost of the service, only, it is unjust to the street railroad passengers to increase the cost of the service by piling excessive special taxes on the street railroad when the only result is to raise the street car fare.

Increased Riding, More Fare or Smaller Costs

The street railroad business can be put on a living basis by increasing the number of passengers carried, by increasing the fare per passenger or by lessening the cost of operating, or by a combination of all.

It is immaterial to the street railroad how the street railroad transportation is put on a living basis, provided that result is accomplished without injury to the Public interest.

A living basis for the street railroad transportation business means a reasonable return on the present fair value of the street railway property devoted to the Public use. It is necessary to put the street railroad business on at least such a living basis because nothing less will enable it to obtain the new capital necessary to furnish the additional and improved transportation service which the people continually demand and which is a necessity of City life.

A living basis must include fair, just wages for the employees. The street railroad cannot contract to pay out large sums in wages in excess of the money available for that purpose. So when the Public, by regulation, reduces the revenue of the street railroad below a living basis it also definitely limits the ability of the street railway to pay the employees fair, just wages. In other words, when by regulation the Public fixes the car fare it also definitely limits the amount that can be paid for wages.

What Becomes of Your Seven-Cent Fare

To put the street railroad on a living basis a very small increase per passenger is required in addition to the present car fare. That small increase will enable the street railroad to furnish ample transportation service and continue to be the same effective agency in promoting the growth of the City in future as in the past. The small needed increase in revenue or fare per passanger is the cheapest investment the Public can make to promote the general Public good and prosperity of the City, because it will so strengthen the credit of the street railroad that it will be able to borrow sufficient new capital to increase and extend its service and to cooperate in the provision for Public improvements necessary to meet the transportation needs of a city of 500,000 people.

The passenger who now pays a seven-cent (7c) cash fare should realize the fact that the average receipt per passenger carried is not seven (7c) cents but five and one-half (5½c) cents. This is true because tickets sold at a discount and passengers handled free on transfers reduce the average fare per passenger to less than five and one-half cents (5½c). One cent (1c) more of the average receipt per passenger carried is paid for taxes, paving streets, and injuries and damages which are largely due to failure to enforce effective traffic regulations, leaving less than four and one-half cents (4½c) average fare per passenger riding to pay the direct cost of transportation, which is what the passenger pays his fare to get. This condition is not understood by the Public. The street car passengers should understand that a large portion of the fares paid by them is diverted to the general tax fund and to pave streets and to pay injuries and damages which are largely the result of the present failure to regulate traffic on the streets. The street railroad taxes are an indirect tax assessment levied on the car riders, as they must be paid out of the car fares, which are the only source of street railroad revenue.

How People Travel

During the rush hours, 5:00 P. M. to 6:00 P. M., automobiles comprise by actual count ninety per cent (90%) of the moving traffic on the streets and street cars nine per cent (9%). But in the number of passengers handled this condition is reversed, automobiles handling only seventeen and three-fourths per cent (17¾%) of the total passengers transported and street cars eighty-two and thirteen one-hundredths per cent (82.13%). At the rush hour period the automobiles average only one (1) passenger per car, not including the driver; the street cars average forty-seven and one-tenth (47.1) passengers per car; so it takes over forty-seven (47) automobiles to handle as many passengers as one street car. During the rush hour by actual count and measurement the automobile passenger uses eleven and two-tenths (11.2) times more street area than the street car passenger. At the time of another actual count and measurement parked autos occupied over 40% of the total street space in the congested down town district. Moving and parked autos (at the time of the investigation) were actually occupying 95% of the total available street space. Could anything more convincingly prove the Public necessity of street car transportation or the extent to which the Public is dependent on it, or the difficulty of giving good service?

The people demand more and better street car transportation because they cannot go to and from their occupations or carry on their business without it; the commerce of the City depends on it. The Public by failing to put it on a living basis is destroying the ability of the street railroad to furnish the service which it demands.

The street railroad does not ask consideration of this problem solely on its own account but also in the Public interest. It is not wedded to any specific plan. It wants sufficient relief in the matters petitioned for to put and keep the street railroad transportation on a living basis.

Will Try Any Plan Public Thinks Best

The street railroad must depend for its support upon the undivided patronage and good will of the people of Atlanta and surrounding territory served. To apply to the Public Service Commission for an increase in fares or any of the other forms of relief petitioned for herein to put the street railroad on a living basis would accomplish nothing if granted unless approved and supported by the Public. If the Public Service Commission granted everything asked the street railroad service would not benefit if the Public is dissatisfied. So any plan to put the street railroad business on a living basis so that it may provide adequate transportation in future in the Public interest must have the approval of both the Public and the Public Service Commission of Georgia. The street railroad does not want to make any application to the Public Service Commission until it has the approval of the Public.

Throughout the year 1923 the Public has been told the facts about the street railroad business. The people vitally interested should understand the problem, consider it, and discuss it. THE STREET RAILROAD WILL TRY ANY FAIR PLAN THE PUBLIC THINKS WILL BEST SERVE ITS INTERESTS. The citizens of Atlanta are asked to consider the question as each individual deals with any problem affecting either the Public or his private business. Make the street railroad problem your own and judge it as your own. Its sole purpose is to render service; the Public must decide how it can best do that.

Your prompt consideration of this petition is urged. Representatives of the street railroad will be glad to appear before you at any time and furnish you every particle of information together with any figures in its possession and any records or books of the street railroad department that you may desire.

Respectfully,

GEORGIA RAILWAY & POWER COMPANY

GOLD OUT OF CELEBES

BY CAPT. A. E. DINGLE

NEXT WEEK: "THE BRIGHT SHAWL," By Joseph Hergesheimer.

"Stay here, miss," he commanded sharply. "I'll come for you when it's safe. Don't move!"

Natalie took to her hiding place trembling, but not with fear. She had seen and heard that which chilled her blood and filled her head with troubled doubts. But she had no time for considering those doubts; Rolfe darted back to his men, divided them into two parties and, carefully during himself that the entire band captors lay before him, he sent out around to an opposite point on the glade and awaited the prearranged whistle.

Soon it became—a cleverly initiated boatswain's pipe for "all hands!" and suddenly the moaning ceased, the guards sat up in swift alarm.

"Give 'em hell, bullies!" roared Rolfe, and in a flash the glade crashed to the discharge of a dozen rifles. The first shots went astray, because the boatswain's pipe brought the captors to their feet after the first surprise; but a second discharge took heavy toll, and the three white officers rallied back to back, shooting frenziedly to their men to stand.

"Ay, they'll stand stiff!" growled Bill Blunt, swinging his rifle endfor-end and jamming the butt into the face of a panic-stricken native seaman. A bullet from Rolfe passed through the head of the leader, and out of a whizzling shower of lead from the Barang's men another white went down. Then the native guards broke, and ran, flinging guns away in their panic. The remaining officer, glaring around with savage hate in his eyes, turned to run, too, but before leaving the spot he spring over to Barry and placed his pistol to the prostrate skipper's head.

Then from the forest rang another shot, echoed by a sobbing cry, and the fellow pitched headlong across Barry, dead, his pistol exploding harmlessly, his throat pouring out his life. And Bill Blunt, following up the shot, came upon Natalie Sheldon, fainting on the edge of the glade, a warm pistol gripped tightly in her rigid hand.

Rolfe and his men had gone immediately to the aid of the tortured captives, and the two guides were dispatched hot foot after water. Then, with willing hands busily washing pained bodies free from sticky sugar and fiercely fighting ants, some distance removed from the spot where other hands were setting fire to the grass to break back the scurrying hordes, Jack Barry and Little began to draw breath free from pangs and scrutinized each other in silent appraisal of damages. Neither had given sign of the agony sustained, save an occasional inevitable moan; yet neither had escaped without grievous injury that was painful if not more serious. But Little's bubbling spirits had not been utterly quenched, only damped; and now he grinned at the skipper with a brave effort at humor.

"Ain't very big, but ain't their darned feet hot!" he said, shrugging his shoulders suggestively.

"Huh!" grunted Barry, swabbing away at his throat, which still bled. "Only thing that bothers me is that a white man can't very well reciprocate the same way. I'd lose an eye to change dispositions with Leyden for just one hour and have him in my hands!"

"Cheer up, old hoss," grinned Little. "Go to it, if the chance turns up, and maybe the missionaries will convert you back to whitemanship again."

Their thoughts were turned into a pleasanter channel by the arrival of Miss Sheldon, recovered from her faintness and eager to be of service to them. She knelt between them, Rolfe's medicine kit in her hands, and began to cleanse and bandage their more painful hurts. The seamen cut down from their trees, were in the hands of their shipmates.

"This is horrible, Capt. Barry," murmured Natalie, wadding his eyes. A flush overspread her face as she strove to utter the thoughts nearest her heart. "I am terribly upset about this," she said. "It seems impossible that sailors of any civilized government could do things like this."

"They don't, miss," returned Barry grimly. He sought her eyes, and her gaze met his for an instant, to be immediately lowered. "These fellows were no more sailors than you are. Perhaps you will be disagreeably surprised to hear that your friend, Mr. Leyden, looked in on us while the ants were feeding."

"Mr. Leyden? Impossible!" cried the girl, drawing back and regarding Barry with horror. "Surely you are mistaken."

"I thought you would't believe it," rejoined Little, with a wry smile. "True, though, miss, and he said he'd look in on us again before the ants took their dessert."

"What about Vandersee, Cap'n Barry?" blurted out Rolfe, coming up and breaking in on the talk without ceremony.

"Vandersee?" queried the skipper. "What of him, Rolfe? I'd given a lot to have him around when this happened. I'll bet we never would have got into this mess."

"But didn't he get you?" Jerry Rolfe's voice went to squeak with astonishment.

"Get us? What's biting you, Man?"

Rolfe showed the skipper the message he had received from the big Hollander, and Barry scanned it narrowly, then passed it on to Little.

"I don't quite understand this," replied Barry, puzzled. "Perhaps he meant real navy men. These were fakes, as you have found out by now."

"Sure, but I'd have been leary about firing on 'em at that if Blunt hadn't spotted their imitation uniforms first, sir."

"Well, Vandersee had nothing to do with this, Rolfe. As I have told Miss Sheldon, it was Leyden who looked in on us; and it was Leyden's men who got us, fooling me with their official attitude."

"Oh, what does it all mean?" cried Natalie, gazing from face to face in perplexity. "Are you sure that Mr. Leyden has done this thing? He told me you were opium smugglers, Capt. Barry, and I believed that he was aiding the government to stamp out the traffic."

"Opium!" gasped the skipper furiously. "That's what the fake navy officer pulled on us up the river. He contrived to find a can or two in the shacks, too."

"Untrue! Good God, Miss Sheldo, what do you take us for?"

The girl was silent. She lowered her face and went on with her work of alleviating pain, and all talk ceased. Every man there realized that somewhere behind the outward show of chance hostility lay a deeper, more sinister problem yet to be solved. Barry found himself peering up at the girl, wondering if, after all, she was out of his reach. Her touch thrilled him, and when her eyes met his in fleeting glance they glowed warm and moist, her lips trembled as if she were fighting to restrain tears, and at sight of Little's quizzical grin fastened upon him prevented him uttering a spech that must have embarrassed the girl.

The silent stress was relieved by the gruff, deep-sea voice of Bill Blunt, leading somebody into the little jungle covert where the injured men lay.

"I tell ye we didn't pitch into no navy party, mister," the old fellow growled. "All as we done wuz to knock seven bells out a mob o' dirty murderers. Come on an' see the skipper hisself. He kin tell yet."

Vandersee emerged from the bush, strode across to Barry and knelt beside him. His face was dark with irritation.

"I am sorry to see this, captain," he said softly, and his usual smile swept across his face, to leave it dark again. "I particularly wished to avoid this attack, though. It's very unfortunate."

"Unfortunate!" snapped Barry, amazed at the man's cool attitude. "Wasn't it more unfortunate for us to be making a meal for a few million ants? I'm darned glad Rolfe attacked, and I don't understand your message telling him to hold off."

"Let me explain, sir," replied Vandersee, and now he was entirely like his old self—suave, smiling, soft spoken. "I wanted to get Leyden myself. That is why I am here. I missed him by minutes when he first visited you to gloat over you; and I had him followed and knew he was coming back. He killed my man, so I had nothing to do but wait here for his second visit. Now he won't come back, for his men who got away have rejoined and are with him by now."

"See here, Vandersee," exploded the skipper angrily. "I want to know more about your part in this mess. I have been held up as an opium smuggler; there is no gold in Houten's riven—never has been—yet Leyden got dust through Gordon; and when Little and I and all Houten's men are threatened with annihilation by some of Leyden's men masquerading as Dutch sailors, you coolly tell me our rescue is unfortunate. Houten sent you here, didn't he? Then what's the answer?"

Vandersee smiled gently and regarde Miss Sheldon with a wonderful depth of tenderness, strange to see in a man of his bulk. Then he shrugged slightly and answered:

"I think I must tell you, since matters have turned out this way. It will interest Miss Sheldon, too, I hope, and perhaps it won't hurt my plans very much after all.

"I am an officer in the Holland navy. On leave now, I am completing some private business of my own while doing some work for my government. Only to tell you what immediately concerns you, I am out to catch Leyden's band of opium runners."

"My Leyden an opium runner!" breathed Natalie, dumbfounded.

"I'm sorry to say he is, Miss Sheldon. Oh, have no fear—" he interjected, seeing the pain in her eyes—"he would never have been permitted to carry you from here, miss. You have been in good keeping, before and since you left the mission. There was a reason for letting Leyden go so far; a reason which I must withold still. But there is a definite limit set to his progress, which I hoped would be reached today. Now, unfortunately, he has escaped me for the moment; but have no doubts, you, Capt. Barry and Mr. Little, that at the proper time you will be let in on what seems no doubt a mystery just now."

"Mystery's right," retorted Little. "You know, Vandersee, I have always looked upon you as a sort of Admirable Crichton among snilors. Yet you let me make that awful mess back at the river entrance, letting go the anchors by meddling with the gears you had showed me. Now here you crop up, when I am half eaten, and tell me when the proper time comes I'll know all! It's like a yellow-backed novel."

Vandersee smiled broadly. He admired the cheery ex-salesman. He rose to his feet, carefully dusting off his knees and replied:

"That accident with the anchors was nothing but chance, Mr. Little. If I smiled, it was simply because there was an element of humor in your amazement at the result of your meddling. I assure you that was all."

"Then why not push right after Leyden now and get the thing settled one way or the other?" blurted Barry. "All this stuff about opium smuggling doesn't concern us much. We came here on a definite errand for Cornelius Houten, and it seems that's a flivver. What's to hinder Little and myself clearing out from here? Your affair with Leyden isn't our affair, is it?"

"I know, gentlemen," Vandersee said. "It will be several days at least before you recover from your ordeal. Meanwhile I suggest that you have your men carry you back to the post. Mrs. Goring is caring for Gordon there and will gladly take care of you, assisted by Miss Sheldon."

"I shall be very glad to do anything," the girl responded, and suddenly Jack Barry felt the need for comfort he had disdained a moment before

Cornelius Houten's trading post was no longer a place of commonplace commerce. With the return of the injured men, the dim, cool, main hut was transformed into a quiet hospital, in which two sore and weary men were ministered to by two gentle, capable nurses. There was something amazingly mysterious in the swift change; for Barry and Little were carried inside, placed on ready cots and soothed with cooling unguents without a moment's delay, as if they had been expected in just such a fashion ever since their advent on the river.

Mrs. Goring came in without the least visible surprise and with her usual sweet smile, her low voice was that of a woman intent on a customary duty; she directed Natalie Sheldon in the work and received her unquestioning obedience. When the side of the hut was raised to admit the afternoon sunlight, Little sought Barry's eyes with whimsical wonder, and the skipper shook his head painfully and growled back:

"Oh, what's the use! May as well hold tight and give the cure a chance. No good asking me what I think of it all. I give it up. No good at conundrums!"

The last words drawled out, and Barry fell asleep. Then Natalie bent over him, drew a mosquito curtain around his head, and gazed down at him with a soft, uncertain light in her luminous eyes. Mrs. Going watched from a dark corner, and when the girl moved away from Barry's cot and approached Little, the older woman smiled with great sympathy and went quietly out.

The ex-salesman watched to; and his eyes twinkled when Natalie bent that searching look upon Barry. He noted with a grin her tender little touches at the skipper's couch and settled himself complacently in expectation of similar attention. His eyes closed, and he folded his hands placidly over his chest as Natalie stepped to his side, and then he peeped slyly at her, ready to give her some characteristically humorous greeting.

But to his discomfiture he saw tears brimming her eyes, and the small hand that drew his curtains trembled piteously. Tom Little lost all his humor and lay quite still until she turned away. Then, with a sob, she ran outside after Mrs. Goring, and so unsettled by her trouble was Little that the sleep which should have placed him on the road to recovery utterly deserted him, and the heat became suddenly oppressive.

But the day came when they were permitted to walk, and then the stockade formed their promenade ground. With a nurse for each, their convalescence could have been no more agreable in the midst of civilization. And as Barry gained strength he found himself and Natalie, Little and Mrs. Goring, pairing off in their slow rambles, and once more awkwardness of speech descended upon him like a wet blanket. He had caught a suggestive look on Little's face, and an answering smile on Mrs. Goring's, that told him as plainly as words that his opportunity was thus given to him.

"Miss Sheldon, I was just going to call you Natalie and tell you something very near to my heart," he blurted out. "I'm going to forget that, now, and wait until you get what's troubling you off your mind."

"Why, Capt. Barry," she cried, blushing furiously, "whatever do you mean? There is nothing troubling me, except the trouble that has come upon this peaceful little station."

"The Light That Failed."

(At the Howard.)

Percy Marmont's work in "The Light That Failed," the picturization of Rudyard Kipling's most famous novel by Paramount, showing at the Howard all this week, will live for many years to come. As Dick Heldar, the artist, whose sketches of the British troops in action in the Soudan make him famous, and who goes blind as result of a sabre wound received on the battle front in the Soudan, Marmont gives to the screen a great impersonation. He is most impressive in the scenes in his studio when he is hastening the completion of his masterpiece knowing that his eyesight is failing him. Jacqueline Logan and Sigrid Holmquist are featured in the cast which is very excellent.

"The Printer's Devil."

(At the Rialto.)

Wesley Barry, mischievous as ever, with all the dash and the love of fun that won our affection and enshrined him in our heart of hearts long ago, stormed the town yesterday, recapturing old and making new friends. The occasion was the first showing of "The Printer's Devil," which opened for a week's run at the Rialto theater.

Here is a picture well worth looking at, shot through as it is with the stuff of adventure, redolent with the spirit of boyhood, punctured with fun and happy-go-lucky, innocent humor. Here is a picture we would go twelve blocks out of our way to see, and then beg permission to see over again. For it has quality.

"Flaming Youth."

(At the Metropolitan.)

This is the picture which is painted by "Flaming Youth," a startling First National photodrama which opened last night at the Metropolitan theater.

The play can, in a way, be considered an expose of modern society life and yet it is more than that, for it tells an absorbing dramatic and romantic story, centering for the most part around a young girl who is brought up in an atmosphere of unconventional frivolity.

Love was but a superficial passion and marriage only a matter of form. So reasoned Patricia Fentriss and she laid her course accordingly. From one affair to the other she leaps with amazing rapidity. She plays with fire and glories in the discomfort of her "victims" and then she mets real love.

"HUMAN FLY" ACT PROVES FORSYTH HEADLINE NUMBER

Dare Devil Johnny Reynolds, headliner at Keith's Forsyth the first half of this week, billed as "vaudeville's original human fly," lived up to his reputation and afforded thrills of every known description to audiences who witnessed his unique performance Monday afternoon and night.

Several times during the course of his act, which includes the "rocking chair stunt"—where the artist stacks a number of chairs atop of one another, climbs thereupon and sways back and forth a number of times before the eventual collapse downward—the audiences almost groaned under the strain of expectancy. When he emerged from the debris of chairs on the floor unhurt a sigh of relief and applause followed.

Next in major importance on the bill is the one-act skit entitled "Learn to Smile," presented in a most humorous and whimsical manner by Miss Claire Vincent & Co. Miss Vincent has appeared on the Keith bills in Atlanta several times in the past and always carries away a queen's share of the honors.

"The Four Entertainers," consisting of a quartet of talented artists, offer an act that entitles them to the cognomen under which they appear on the program. All four of them recently concluded contracts with the popular musical comedy, "Listen Lester."

Leona Stephens and Len Hollister in a spicy line of chatter which they dub "The Passing Parade" have a fair act. A Pathe news reel and a new episode of "Aesop's Fables" conclude the program.

W. H. WIMPEE.

MOTION PICTURE PROVES FEATURE OF LOEW'S BILL

Despite the fact that Harry Fox left Broadway lights to appear on Loew's vaudeville circuit, despite his popularity in "Oh, Look," musical comedy, and his daring in movie production, he failed to take signal honors at Loew's Grand last night. If Harry Fox's act had been twice as good as it was, and the musical comedy star took several curtain calls, it could not take the place of "Hearts Aflame," a movie production, the round-table discussions and at noon real headliner of the show. Anna Q. Nillson and Frank Keenan are the stars in this picture taken from the famous novel, "Timber."

Lady Tsen Mei, known as "the Chinese nightingale," suprised the audience with her voice, which, though not strong, carried a sweetness that was winning. She was, however, most effective with her imitations of "Our barnyard friends." Lady Mei was called back for an encore and took several curtain calls besides.

Jules Barnard and Florence Scarth had an amusing little one-act skit, "Loan-Sum Street." Their play on words was catchy.

The Turner brothers had an act entirely new, combining dancing and acrobatics into a conglommeration of foolishness. Though the opening act, the Turners scored a distinct hit.

Jim and Irene Marlyn saved an otherwise dull act from a commonplace ending with a futuristic cakewalk. There seemed to be a lot of unnecessary explaining and not enough dancing in this act for the first three-quarters, but the Marlyns made up for it in their final number. The settings and costumes were above the ordinary, and were a considerable asset.

FORMER ATLANTA MAN NEAR DEATH IN ACCIDENT HERE

Miraculously escaping serious injury, William Pappas, 32, former Atlantan, now in business at Birmingham, was struck by an automobile at West Peachtree and Peachtree place early Monday night.

Although the wheels of the machine passed entirely over his body an examination by physicians at Grady hospital disclosed that he was only slightly bruised. Internal injuries are not expected to develop.

J. B. Scarratt, 21, driver of the machine, was arrested by Motorcycle Officers P. L. Williams and P. B. Dailey and held under $500 bond on a charge of reckless driving.

Pappas was taken to Grady hospital by R. L. Nixon, of 45 Boulevard drive, East Lake, W. J. Harmon, of 242 Washington street, an eye witness, told the police that Pappas stepped from behind a street car into the path of Scarratt's machine, which he said was going about 15 or 20 miles an hour.

ATLANTANS ASKED TO JOIN IN TRIP AROUND WORLD

Atlanta delegates are wanted by the San Francisco chamber of commerce to accompany members of that body on a trade extension tour around the world upon inauguration of the Dollar Steamship Company of San Francisco.

A communication to this effect was received Monday by B. S. Barker, secretary of the Atlanta chamber. The steamer leaves Frisco January 5. The Pacific body wants to make the tour one representative of American commerce.

The local chamber is investigating the matter and will endeavor to find merchants who are willing to make the trip.

Higher Prices for Cotton Bring Mill Curtailment

Boston, December 3.—(Special.)—The Merchants National bank of this city says in its monthly summary of the cotton industry:

"Increasing evidence of world shortage of cotton has led to further sharp advances in the prices of cotton and cotton goods during the past month. The raw material has risen about 5 1-2 cents or 18 per cent within the past 30 days and at present levels is up 13 cents or 55 per cent from the low point of last August. Staple print cloths and sheetings have risen by half a cent to a cent a yard during the month and 1 1-2 to 3 cents a yard since August. Most lines of goods have not risen sufficiently to compensate manufacturers for the increased cost of the raw material, with a result that many mills have found manufacturing margins reduced to the vanishing point or converted into losses. Buyers of goods have operated very conservatively, their purchases of many lines being below the productive capacity of the mills. Under these circumstances many manufacturers have had no choice but to curtail production drastically.

"The extent to which the raw cotton and cotton goods markets have advanced during the past month is shown by the following quotations: Middling Upland Spot cotton at New York has risen in this period from 31 3-4 cents to about 36 1-2 cents; number 20s two-ply carded yard on skeins has risen from about 50 cents to about 55 cents per pound; and number 10s carded yarn on frame cones from 45 cents to 49 1-2 cents. A standard wide print cloth, 38 1-2 inches wide, counting 60x60, 5.35 yards to the pound, has advanced from 10 1-8 cents to 11 cents per yard, and a four-yard brown sheeting, 36 inches wide, counting 56x60, has moved up from 12 1-4 cents to 13 1-8 cents. At present prices manufacturing margins are in some instances 6 to 8 cents a pound or 25 per cent to 30 per cent less than they were last spring.

Low Supplies.

"The low level to which supplies of cotton have fallen is shown by the fact that total stocks in all hands in this country, including the estimated unpicked portion of the new crop, totaled only about 8,697,000 bales on October 31 this year against 9,767,600 last year and an average of 12,230,000 in the past four years. If imports, exports and consumption were the same during the balance of this season as in the corresponding period of last year, there would be only about 800,000 bales left in the country at the end of this season, or less than one month's normal consumption and exports. The total supply of American cotton, at country points and principal markets in the United States, afloat to and at the ports of Great Britain and the continent, plus the estimated unpicked portion of the new crop, was only 7,787,000 bales on November 16. In the portion of last season following November 16 the spinners of the world took about 8,330,000 bales.

"The mills of this country did not consume quite as much cotton from August 1 to October 31, this year, as in the corresponding period a year ago, their aggregate consumption being 1,517,000 bales this year against 1,554,000 last year. Consumption during October was 541,000 bales against 483,000 in September but the increase was due entirely to the greater number of working days in the later month. Average daily consumption was only about 22,100 bales in October against 22,500 in September. Spindle-activity figures indicate that the mills of the country ran on an average at about 95 per cent of single-shift capacity in October, overtime operations in the south largely offsetting extensive curtailment in the north.

"Exports have been running larger this year than a year ago, totaling 2,188,000 bales to November 16 this year against 1,908,000 last year. Recent cable reports from Manchester, England, tell of substantial improvement in the English cotton trade."

MONEY AT WORK

Brief But Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Stocks, Bonds and Investments.

One of our most successful financiers once remarked, "I never try to buy at the bottom or sell at the top." What did he mean?

The statement above indicates that the successful financier was a long-pull trader on the security markets. The long-pull trader realizes the folly of trying to pick the exact top or the exact bottom of prices in either the stock or bond markets.

Securities move up and down over a period of years in a more or less definite trend. There are times when prices are too high and also times when they are too low.

When prices are low the long-pull trader buys. He doesn't waste time or energy fretting whether or not they will go lower. When prices are high he sells and keeps his money liquid in short-term securities or a savings account until prices are down again.

He is satisfied to buy somewhere near the bottom and sell somewhere near the top.

The chances are that the man who tries for the exact top or bottom will lose his sense of perspective and get badly fooled.

The long-pull trader, on the other hand, will make a fair profit over a period of years because his judgment is not clouded by day-to-day events, which are relatively unimportant in the long-term run.

Atlanta Cotton Exchange to Bar Odd Lot Traders

New York, December, 3.—Two members of the New York cotton exchange today were summoned to appear before the business conduct committee of the exchange on Wednesday in connection with the alleged leakage of quotations. At the same time the cotton exchange of Atlanta and Augusta, Ga., were warned that failure to safeguard New York cotton exchange quotations would result in discontinuance of the service to them.

This action, which is a part of the exchange's war on bucket shops, Louis Brooks, chairman of the business conduct committee, explained, is the result of an investigation into the leakage of exchange quotations to certain outside houses which said they did an odd lot cotton brokerage business.

"The committee is continuing its inquiry into the alleged misuse of the exchange quotations and kindred matters," he said, "and it is possible that other members may be summoned before it if information now in the hands of the committee is substantiated."

Other cotton exchanges in the south, Mr. Brooks stated, will be notified of the New York cotton exchange's policy to refuse use of its quotations if any evidence of leakage is discovered.

Edward T. Bartlett, Jr., president of the exchange, announced that members would be held strictly accountable for failure to take proper precautions to prevent quotations reaching the hands of persons not authorized to receive them. Without the quotations, cotton bucketshops could not exist, he said.

ATLANTA IS IN ACCORD WITH NEW YORK EXCHANGE

J. Hope Tigner, secretary of the Atlanta Commercial exchange, Monday night stated that the local organization was in thorough accord with the New York body.

"This matter has been under consideration for some time," he said "and the action of the New York exchange is intended to safeguard all its quotations from all dealers except members of the exchange.

"In the past it has been the custom of the Atlanta Commercial exchange to allow members to extend privileges of the floor to members of the Odd Lots exchange, who operate in Savannah, Atlanta, and Augusta. In the future this privilege will be withdrawn."

Heavy Profit Taking Seen In Stock Market Monday

DAY'S SUMMARY.

Total stock sales 1,076,300 shares.

Twenty industrials averaged 92.63; net loss .52.

High 1923: 105.38; low 85.76.

Twenty railroads averaged 86.75; net loss 20.

High 1923: 90.51, low 79.53.

New York, December 3.—Heavy profit-taking by professional traders who apparently acquired large lines of stock at materially lower prices imparted a reactionary trend to today's stock market after an initial display of strength. Selling was influenced largely by the progressive bloc's tactics at the opening of congress and speculative uncertainty as to the outcome of the British general election on Thursday.

The reaction was most pronounced in such speculative favorites as Baldwin, American Can, Davison Chemical and the Pan-American issues, each of which showed a net loss of two or more points on the day. Studebaker and U. S. Steel common each dropped about a point.

Opening strength in which gains of one to three points were common was attributed to the optimistic business forecast for 1924 made by E. H. Gary, chairman of the United States Steel corporation. Studebaker and American Can touched new highs on the current upswing while Kresge, National Supply and Computing, Tabulating and Recording sold at their highest prices of the year.

Widespread circulation of private reports that the La Follette group would block the election of a speaker brought a flood of offerings onto the floor around the end of the first hour, many traders apparently acting on the theory that the technical condition of the market which has been rising almost steadily since October 31 warranted a reaction at this time, regardless of developments at Washington.

There were several conspicuous exceptions to the downward trend. Marland was run up more than five points to 32 3-4, dropping back later to 32 1-8. Strength of this issue was ascribed in some quarters to "window dressing" for a forthcoming bond issue and in others to a report that the proposed financing had been abandoned. Other oils were helped by the reports of a further reduction in production at the Powell fields in central Texas, Houston Oil showing a five point gain on the day.

The decline in the rails was less pronounced than in the industrials with a few issues, such as "Nickel Plate," Chesapeake and Ohio and Texas and Pacific showing substantial gains on the day. Union Pacific and Atlantic Coast Line were the conspicuous heavy spots.

Other weak spots in the industrial list were U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, American Hide and Leather, preferred, United Railway Investment, preferred, International Paper and Schulte Stores, all off two points or more.

Call money opened at five per cent, softened to 4 3-4 and thence to 4 1-2, where it closed. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged at 5 to 5 1-4 per cent.

Foreign exchanges showed little change from Saturday with business quiet. Demand sterling was off a cent at 4.33 3-4 and French francs were steady around 5.36 1-2 cents. Changes in other rates were small and unimportant.

Topeka, Kan., December 3.—A decrease in the Kansas winter wheat acreage of 1,826,410 acres or 15.76 percent, as compared with that sowed a year ago, is shown in a report issued today by the state board of agriculture. The estimate is 9,761,000 acres. It is the smallest acreage sown since 1917, the report says.

New York December 3.—There was a break of about a cent a pound in the cotton market here today under heavy general liquidation which seemed to be chiefly inspired by a tendency toward increased estimates of the crop. January contracts which had rallied from 35.70 the low point of Friday, to 36.56 on Saturday, broke to 35.52 today, or 93 points from Saturday's closing quotation. aJnuary closed at 35.67 with the general market closing irregular at the declines of 70 to 86 points on the more active positions and 150 points net lower on August.

The market opened barely steady at an advance of 3 points to a decline of 21 points on all months except August which was 40 points lower. There was some buying at the start on the relatively firm ruling of Liverpool but the strength of the cables seemed to be fully offset by private crop reports placing the yield at nearer ten million than nine and a half million bales, the figures talked of on the advance of last week. No other news feature was commented upon particularly in connection with the decline but the seling became more general as prices worked lower and the market was weak and unsettled during the entire day.

All months made new lows for the movement selling well below the lowest prices touched on the break of last Friday, with December declining to 36.00, March to 35.77 and May to 35.90 in the later trading. Last prices were 12 to 25 points up from the lowest on covering. Trade interests were moderate buyers during the day and for a time there was enough demand to hold May just above the 36-cent level, but the buyers were gradually supplied and at the low prices the market showed net losses of 88 to 110 points on the active positions. There were four private crop reports published ranging from 9,765,000 up to 10,074,000 bales. Much of the selling here was attributed to the liquidation of English and continental long accounts. Private cables reported a good spot demand in Liverpool, but said bull speculation was cautious pending the elections.

REACTIONS SEEN AT NEW ORLEANS

New Orleans, December 3.—A higher range of private crop estimates turned reactionary feelings on full force in the cotton market today and wide declines marked the trading, lowest prices coming toward the end when January was off to 35.50 cents a pound and the list was 97 to 100 points lower than the final prices of last week. The close was 79 to 97 points net lowe on the day the last sale of January being at 35.57.

Near months were 13 to 20 points up on the opening, but before the first call was over values commenced to slide off and early declines amounted to 70 points on the positions under most pressure. Small recoveries set in, but did not last and at midday the declines again were widened, but the heaviest selling and widest declines were not seen until the late trading. Liverpool was better than due, which was the main reason for the gains on some months on the opening. January traded as high as 36.70.

A private crop estimate of 10,074,000 bales caused a good part of the selling and the effect of it was increased by another estimate of 9,904,000 bales. Two other estimates appeared, one of 9,881,000 bales and another of 9,765,000. Even the lowest of these was well above the estimates current last week. Rumors were heard that private ginning returns reported the crop estimates of the day and the heaviest offerings followed the rumor that ginning this last period amounted to 750,000 bales, a figure well above general expectations.

SPORTS IN NEW ORLEANS.

New Orleans, December 3.—Spot cotton 25 points lower; sales on the spot 336 bales; to arrive 328; receipts 12,203; stock 224,228. Low middling, 32.25; middling, 35.75; good middling, 36.87.

ADVANCE IS SEEN IN WHEAT MARKET

Chicago, December 3.—Wheat took an upward swing in price during the late dealings today, helped by a decrease of the United States and Canadian visible supply totals and by a reduction of winter crop acreage in Kansas. The market closed firm 1-4 @3-8 to 1 cent net higher, December 1.04 7-8 to 1.05 and May 1.10 5-8@1.10 3-4. Corn finished unchanged to 3-8 cent up, oats at 1-8 to 1-4 cent advance and provisions showing a rise that varied from 5 cents to 35 cents.

Reports that Germany had completed negotiations for a new loan gave the wheat market an upward tendency at the opening but the effect failed to last, aggressive selling and lack of support from buyers proving to be more than an offset. Besides, a temporary break in the corn market had also a depressing influence on wheat. Subsequently, however, as indications accumulated that a big falling off in the domestic visible supply total would be announced, a more friendly feeling toward the buying side of the market was in evidence and for the first time in several weeks the price of May delivery went above 1.10.

Active purchasing for eastern account lifted the wheat market to the day's top level just before the close, notwithstanding that a large decrease of the visible supply figures is frequent prior to the close of lake navigation and may be counterbalanced later when all the grain gets to eastern ports. The Kansas state estimate that seeded acreage had diminished nearly 16 per cent was distinctly more bullish than had generally been looked for.

Eastern selling made the corn market incline to drag, despite wet weather and smallness of receipts. Oats were firmer owing to prospective liberal shipments from here.

Provisions ascended with hogs. January ribs touched a new high for the season.

News, Views And Reviews

STOCK LETTER.

New York, December 3.—The strong week-end closing brought buying orders into the stock market this morning with Amn. Can acting as leader, selling up to 105⅝, a new high figure. Traders were somewhat skeptical, however, and after the first hour commenced to put out fairly large blocks of stock, including Baldwin, Steel, Studebaker and Can. Profit-taking also played an important part in the set-back, as there are many who feel that while congress is organizing the market will be steadied to some unsettlement.

Pan American was weak upon the announcement that Standard Oil had decided not to renew its contract with them for the purchase of gasoline in 1924. Failure to renew contract is due to the fact that the Standard oil has enough gasoline and has made arrangements in several large cities along these lines.

The market was weakest about noon with Baldwin down 2½ points, Can down 2, Pan American 2¼ and Steel 1⅛. Against this downward trend, Maryland moved steadily upward to 31½, again of 3⅛ points. New financing is said to be on the eve of announcement and it may be that the stock is being held strong for this purpose. CPU. holds steady, while COS. PFN. and PRM. are also well sustained. Public participation is increasing and advancing prices naturally attract outside attention quicker than anything else. The biggest bankers and industrial leaders continue to issue optimistic statements and there appears to be no doubt that the president's message will be satisfactory to all but the radicals. It is the consensus of opinion that the noise of the latter will not amount to much, at the same time there are some who believe that congress has a hard time ahead and are accordingly preparing for any sudden declines by placing stop-loss orders on long stock. The afternoon trading was full of cross currents with certain stocks advancing while others declined. The final tone was irregular.—Fenner & Beane.

COTTON LETTER.

New York, December 3.—The market has been unsettled and reactionary under heavy realizing, with local selling for short account induced by a feeling that the next ginning report, as well as the final official estimate of the crop, would show larger than ideas recently current. In the almost complete absence of speculative short interest, offerings have been absorbed in a very creditable fashion and any developments suggesting a further broadening of the demand for goods, would bring on an effort to replace long lines and at the same time increase the trade demand. Much fixing of prices still remains to be done, according to very reliable information, and spot advices have been on the whole favorable today, while reports from Manchester indicate that a very large turnover took place there last month, the total of which will compare very favorable with any single month in the past two years. The selling today has helped the technical position, and a further reaction, if it occurs, will present a good opportunity for purchases.—Post & Flafg.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, December 3.—Private crop estimates, which were somewhat larger than generally anticipated, induced general liquidation which, with the uncovering of stop orders, resulted in a rather wide decline. We believe that the day's decline can be attributed to liquidation in anticipation of the government's ginning report on the eighth and their final estimate on the twelfth, than any inherent weakness, as with the improved trade conditions and recognition of distributors of the short supply confronting the trade, not only in actual cotton, but in manufactured goods as well, would seem to be an assurance of steadier and higher markets after these reports are out of the way. While further liquidation is not unlikely we believe any further reaction will be but moderate and temporary.—J. D. Hayward & Sons.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, December 3.—After opening 20 points up on good Liverpool the market turned reactionary on increased crop estimates, talk to the effect that the next ginning report will confirm the larger estimates, report that London was liquidating freely sold off 120 points from the high.

Our estimate of 9,765,000 was accepted as bullish, but predictions of our correspondents that 7 per cent of the crop remains to be ginned after the date of this report, about November 26, turned attention to the probability of the next ginning report being bearish and sobered many otherwise bullishly inclined.

Three other estimates, ranging from 9,881,000 to 10,074,000, and rumors that one of the bureaus which recently predicted a crop of 9,320,000 had raised it nearly half a million bales tended to shake confidence in estimates under 9,500,000, on which most of the recent advance was predicated and increased the liquidation.

Checking of the bull movement in Bombay through prohibiting future sales and fixing of maximum prices for settlement of old transactions had a sentimental effect. Some attributed the liquidation of London to the Bombay situation, but it is most probably due to expectation that the president's message will not hold out anything of hope for Europe.

The market appears likely to remain more or less unsettled until it adjusts itself to higher estimates and increased ginnings. The fundamental show ever are bullish as ever.—Fenner & Beane.

STOCK LETTER.

New York, December 3.—With no new developments over the week-end, stocks should continue on the upward move that was started Saturday. Then it was demonstrated that the market had thrown off the lethargy of the holiday markets and was recovering from the reactionary trend of the first part of the week. Stocks should remain strong over the presentation of the president's address to congress. The organization of congress is exciting a good deal of comment over the radical group in it, but the best opinion is that, while there will be some startling proposals, no radical explanation can be accomplished in this session.

Believing that the trend of prices is still upward, stocks are a purchase on all reactions. It is reported now that on the 6th American Steel Foundry will go on a $4 annual basis in place of the present rate of $3. The equipment stocks still look higher. Other market leaders should also do better. Steel common in particular seems a good purchase on weak spots. The truck companies. Hudson Motor, the Mercantile stocks, the sugar producing companies and the can companies should move higher.—Livingston & Co.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans December 3.—Various crop estimates around ten million bales started a selling movement, which in its early stage encountered some trade buying, but after this had been satisfied the market worked rapidly to lower levels. The selling was mostly in the nature of profit-taking by one large operator, with some short selling by western interests, where the idea that the crop has been underestimated seems to find considerable favor. Unless the crop has been grossly misrepresented as to the advance stage of picking and ginning around the middle of last month, we fail to see how estimates of around ten million bales can be made good. We consider cotton a purchase on all good breaks—E. B. Norman & Co.

COTTON LETTER.

New Orleans, December 3.—The market assumed a reactionary tendency today as result of less favorable reparations news, larger private crop estimates and report that Bombay futures market was closed except for settlement of business, and that maximum rates were fixed to help the Bazar through its difficulty in clearing. The refusal of the U. S. to participate in Premier Poincare's proposed reparation investigation gave the plan a setback.

Four additional private crop estimates were issued today in advance of the annual crop estimate by the government, due December 12, ranging from 9,765,000 to 10,074,000, exclusive of linters, or larger than recent estimate for a yield of only 9,320,000 to 9,500,000, occasioned values to advance to the highest levels of the season, and it was only natural for values to recede in consequence of the increased crop estimate.

The most depressing development of the day, however, was a report that Bombay India, cotton futures market was closed except for settlement of business and that maximum rates were fixed to help the bazar through its difficulties in clearing.

The reported fixing of maximum rates were taken to mean that maximum prices have been fixed for India cotton, which assumption was reflected in heavy liquidation in New York, said to be account of large London interests. The report that London was liquidating unsettled the market materially.

Because of the larger crop ideas, it is possible that there will be more pre-bureau liquidation, particularly if market bulges meanwhile.

In the meantime the trade is awaiting the estimate of the National Ginners as to the probable amount of cotton ginned to December1, report on which the census bureau will issue on the eighth.

The president's message to congress Wednesday and the English election Thursday may have some influence on the speculative markets also.

The reluctance with which the dry goods markets in New York has responded to the big advance in raw cotton, many descriptions being far below the cost of replacement, with spot cotton ruling so high, is discouraging.

As yet the market appears to be in process of liquidation.—A. & B. Beer.

Combined averaged month ago 86.86; year ago 88.83.

New York, December 3.—Postponement until later in the week of the expected announcement of a time limit for the deposit of bonds under the Mexican debt agreement plan, influenced a sharp decline in Mexican bonds in today's bond market. Both the 4s and 5s continued upward in the forenoon but fell off quickly in the later trading, the 5s closing 1 3-8 lower and the 4s off fractionally.

Some improvement was recorded in the industrial and public utility groups, although the net changes generally were small. The buying orders were scattered including a few oils, coppers and sugars. The sale of a sizeable block of American telephone and telegraph 4s of 1936 carried that issue down more than a point.

Good buying was evident among a considerable list of western railroad mortgages in the forenoon but with a few exceptions the trend was down ward toward the close. Substantial gains, however, were recorded by Chicago Great Western 4s, Chicago and Alton 3 1-2s and New Orleans. Texas and Mexico income 5s.

Moderate improvement was registered by active U. S. government bonds.

Bankers announced early in the day the over subscription of an offering of $12,500,000, St. Paul union depot bonds. Early offering of an issue of about $10,000,000, Marland Oil bonds was reported in the financial district.

Wall Street Speculates On Message of President

BY R. L. BARNUM.

New York, December 3.—While best banking opinion here is that the month will see higher stock market prices than November there was considerable profit-taking today both in cotton and stocks. In cotton the profit-taking was on the belief it would at least be stopped by the crop estimate put out by the Commercial Appeal. In stocks there was profit-taking on the forthcoming message of President Coolidge to congress to be made public Wednesday at noon. This message, Wall street believes, will be highly constructive. There is always profit-taking just before expected good news is made public. According to the gossip heard in banking circles here today, the president does not favor giving artificial aid to the farmers; he believes that the help that will count most must come from themselves. He is the strongest against the League of Nations, but believes strongly in President Harding's policy of a world court and is for joining one as soon as possible. He will confine discussion of the soldier bonus to the simple strong statement that he is against it. He is for the Mellon tax reduction plan and is for a readjustment of railway freight rates, believing some are too high and some are too low but thinks that unless rates are kept on a profitable basis for the carriers, rate-making power should be taken from the interstate commerce commission.

If this gossip heard here today proves to be correct, it is possible that the stock market at first put the wrong construction on where Mr. Coolidge stands on the railroad freight-rate question. From the best banking view here, however, such a statement by President Coolidge to congress would be considered highly constructive.

When the stock market began to recover on October 31, the first advance was in Steel common on the unexpected dividend. Then the rails became active with prices advancing. Then the oils began to do better. Today the rubbers acted better than in many long weeks despite the profit-taking in the market as a whole.

Sears & Roebuck reports sales for November of $20,416,000 against $20,196,000 for the some month of 1922, an increase of only $219,000 or 1.08 per cent. For the eleven months the figures are $194,743,000 against $161,409,000 for 1922, a gain of $33,334,000 or 20.6 per cent. Montgomery, Ward shows November sales at $14,112,000 contrasted with $11,038,000 for 1922, an increase of 28.2 per cent with $119,581,000 for the eleven months, against $80,844,000 for the same months of 1922, a gain of 47.9 per cent. This gain of 47.9 per cent over 1922 for the eleven months of 1922 over 1921. For the comes on top of the 74.4 per cent increase report for the first eleven months of 1922 over 1921. For the eleven months Wontgomery, Ward's sales are $17,425,000 ahead of same period of 1920, which was the previous year of high record business. No one could be found in Wall street today who could satisfactorily explain the marked difference between the November sales of these two large mail order houses.

One thing Wall street expects the incoming congress to do is to look into the protective tariff on woolen goods.

Our daily papers here for some time have been carrying advertisements of well-known clothing people featuring suits and overcoats made of imported English woolen goods at astonishingly low prices. One of the larger retail dealers here in men's clothing asked a manufacturer only last week for an estimate on overcoats to be made up from English cloth furnished by the retail dealers. The manufacturer frankly told the dealer that with labor costs as high as they were, he did not know how to begin figuring to turn out goods to compete with English goods which are poorly made with cheap labor and from low grade cloth.

Cotton sold off in the early trading on the crop estimate put out by conservative Commercial Appeal of Memphis. One of today's estimates from Chicago places this year's cotton crop as low as 9,397,000 bales. The Commercial Appeal makes it 9,904,000. Last week December cotton on this market advanced from 35.30 on Monday to 37.70 on Friday, closing Saturday at 37.10. The opening this morning was 37.15, after which there was a quick decline to 36.45 on the Commercial Appeal's estimate. If this Memphis estimate proves to be correct, higher prices than those now being quoted may be witnessed at the end of the season when actual shortage or something like a shortage exists, but the best feeling here is that in the meantime there will be a decline from the present level. The ablest of our mill men are going ahead selling cotton goods on the basis of 25 cents as the cost of raw cotton. They are not trying to get more: first, because they do not believe the public will pay more and, next, because they are of the opinion that raw cotton, while remaining comparatively high, will not stay at its existing level. Many people, with cotton around the present price, manufacturers point out, will patch their old clothes instead of buying, while others will do without altogether until the prices of cotton goods come down to a fair price considering the world shortage. This economizing on the part of the public, the manufacturers believe, together with a 9,904,000-bale crop, will make enough cotton to go around and will not keep cotton around the present level, at least until late in the season.

REACTIONS EXCEED ADVANCES IN CURB

New York, December 3.—Mixed price changes took place in today's curb market with the major activity on the downward side.

Magnolia Petroleum, up 2 3-4, was the outstanding strong spot among the active oil shares which were bought on reports of another reduction in the output of the Powell field. Gains of a point or more also were registered by Gulf of Pennsylvania, Continental, Ohio Oil, Standard Oils of Kansas and Kentucky and South Pennsylvania Oil. Pennsylvania Mexico fuel dropped more than four points.

A drop of 12 points, five of which were recovered, in New York transit, which recently declared a dividend of 50 cents a share as against two previous payments of $2 each, featured the industrial list. Stutz Motors and Glen Alden Coal each dropped about a point. West Virginia Paper and Pulp's 800,000 shares of no par value were admitted to trading, one sale taking place at 49 3-4.

Establishment of another new high record by Hawthorne mines at 64 and the recovery of United Verde extension's recent substantial loss featured the mining list, trading in which was again centered in the penny shares.

Atlanta Retail Merchants Open 'Shop Now' Drive

The Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, working in conjunction with the United States postoffice, has put on a campaign entitled "Shop Now—Mail Early," to impress upon the shopping public the value and importance of making their Christmas purchases as eary as possible.

Through the courtesy of the Georgia Railway and Power company, for one entire week in December, placards will be displayed on all its street cars traversing the city, while in the windows and at other points of vantage in the stores of the members of the Atlanta Retail Merchants' association, cards will be displayed calling attention of shoppers to the necessity of making Christmas purchases right away.

The entire campaign is designed to render better service to the shopping public, both at the hands of the retail merchants and through the postoffice department, because of last-minute rush during the Christmas holidays naturally produces considerable congestion, both in the stores and at the postoffice, causing unavoidable delays.

In addition to these publicity mediums, moving picture slides will be shown in several of the Atlanta theaters, and other methods used to bring the idea of early shopping and mailing to the attention of the Atlanta public.

Griner Scores Political Stand Of Mrs. Felton

"I have no political respect for any ex-United States senator from Georgia who will run to Florida to confer with a republican president; then sit on the speaker's stand in this house, side by side with our governor; and then tell me in committee room to oppose any legislation that governor has advocated."

In this language Representative Griner, of Ben Hill county, on Monday afternoon paid his respects to Mrs. Rebecca Latimer Felton, former United States senator from Georgia and first woman to occupy that office in the nation.

Representative Griner prefaced his statement with the declaration that "no son of Georgia holds her womanhood in higher reverence than I," but he explained, he felt that he had the right to comment upon the political aspects of a woman's actions after she had entered politics.

Representative New, of Laurens county, later in the debate, which was on the various revenue measures, answered Mr. Griner by stating that anyone, man or woman, senator or ex-senator, republican or democrat, has the right to express whatever views they held before any committee of the general assembly. This, he said, is one of the basic principles of democratic government.

Vivid Picture of Pioneer Days Presented at Atlanta

Some few years ago a European lecturer vsiting this country remarked that "the trouble with America is that you have no historic background."

Of course, the gentleman was wrong. He couldn't have been more completely mistaken. But it is a pity that he couldn't have seen "The Covered Wagon," motion picture extraordinary, which opened a week's engagement at the Atlanta theater Monday night. For, if he had seen this picture, he would either have publicly retracted his criticism or hung his head in shame and guilt for evermore.

No historic background in America? Only thoughtless ignorance could bring such an accusation.

The idea that time is the all-important factor in acquiring a history is mistaken. It matters not how large the canvas on which the story of man's progress is written, measured by months and years. What really matters is the color of his pigments, colors derived from the raw courage, the stern determination and the unflinching mettle of manhood and womanhood under trial and tribulation.

Great Picture Drawn.

With these colors, America has drawn a picture that will live as one of the most colorful pages in the history of mankind on any continent.

And, it is a very vivid glimpse of that picture which is vouchsafed you on the screen, as the soul stirring incidents of Emerson Hough's story unfolds.

As you watch those pioneers of the late forties, slowly pressing forward across the great desert, building for a future greater even than they dreamed, your heart thrills with the glory of your kinship to such a race. Simple, crude, homely men and women, pressing ever onward on the untrodden trail, bearing unimaginable suffering to build for us the greatest nation on earth—if you are not thrilled, it is because the power to thrill in your veins has become atrophied.

Praise for producing this classic of the screen, a picture which should be preserved for all Americans of the future to see, as part of their education, must go first to the director, James Cruze. It is whispered, in movieland, that the company which produced the picture gave it to Cruze to direct as an ordinary program film. He, however, saw the epic nature of the story, realized that he had a saga of the pioneers in his hands and, after days of arguing, pleading and demanding, secured permission to spend the money, to take the time, necessary to produce a picture such as this is today.

Owe Debt to Cruze.

If this whisper is true, every loyal son and daughter of these United States owes an unpayable debt to James Cruze.

The cast contains such well-known and famous performers as Lois Wilson, J. Warren Kerrigan, Charles Ogle, Tully Marshall and others. Then it contains names not so familiar to this commentator, but wonderful performers, nevertheless, for instance, who will ever forget the characterization that Ernest Torrence gave to "Jackson," the guide of the overland trail? Alan Hale, as "Sam Woodhull" was a human villain, and the work of John Fox as the boy, "Jed Wingate," was that of a second Wesley Barry, freckles and all.

There is, by the way, an exceptional orchestra. Eleven of the pieces are additional to the regular orchestra, coming with the picture. The musical score adds tremendously to the picture itself.

Concluding these rambling remarks of appreciation for a splendid evening's entertainment, and giving a little advance dope to those who will see it during the week—it is playing both matinee and night performances every day—there is a regret that Mr. Volstead has banned the proper medium for a toast.

Calls for Tribute.

For were it possible to secure worthy drinking material, the feeling which remains after seeing the picture calls for a suitable tribute to those almost forgotten dead, the Pioneers.

Here's to them. Those that tread the unbroken trails. Those who penetrate first into the wilderness. Those men and women who brave all the dangers of the unknown that we, who come after them, may find the way made easy to our feet.

Ever pressing on, pushing the outposts of civilization always out into new worlds, they go. Their bleached bones mark the trail for the next to follow. Somewhere, ahead of all the rest their restless feet tread, leading until they lie in unknown graves, a glorious army of those who know no fear.

Here's to them! The Pioneers. Drink deep, then turn down the glass in silence, for there is none to answer ye!
RALPH T. JONES.

Chamber Members Are Urged To Go To Polls Wednesday

Stressing the importance of voting in the general election, President Alfred C. Newell, of the chamber of commerce, Monday issued a statement urging all members to participate in the election Wednesday.

"We are too prone to accept the verdict of the white primaries as final," Mr. Newell declared.

Thirteen councilmen, four aldermen and the manager of the waterworks department are to be elected in the election.

The only contest will be in the twelfth ward, where two councilmen are to be elected. J. M. House was nominated for council in the September primary. Since the primary death has removed Councilman R. F. Gilliam from council and four candidates are asking for his place. They are W. D. Langley, V. H. Shearer, William F. Saunders and Thomas S. Goodwin.

Candidates in Election.

Four aldermen nominated in September follow:

Second ward, Dr. P. L. Moon, who will succeed Dr. A. H. Cochran, who has retired; sixth ward, J. L. McLendon, who succeeds himself, and the ninth ward, Oscar Williamson, also nominated to succeed himself.

First ward, S. A. Wardlaw; second ward, Thomas I. Slappey; third ward, Dr. Carl C. Aven; fourth ward, J. A. White; fifth ward, Dr. W. M. Etheridge; sixth ward, Dr. P. L. Baker; seventh ward, W. C. Jenkins; eighth ward, Ed H. Inman; ninth ward, T. Frank Callaway; eleventh ward, Leo Sudderth, and twelfth ward, J. M. House.

Election of the councilman from the twelfth ward to fill Councilman Gilliam's unexpired term will be city-wide because the vacancy occurred after the white primary.

Newell's Message.

The message of President Alfred Newell to the membership of the chamber of commerce follows:

"I want to urge every member of the Atlanta Chamber of Commerce to go to the polls and cast his ballot Wednesday. I should like to go even further and urge every citizen of Atlanta qualified to vote to see to it that his vote is registered in Wednesday's election.

"We are too prone to accept the verdict of our white primaries as final. In the past they have been so, but we should not go to sleep on a situation that is fraught with so many possible dangers as a general election with the electorate indifferent. I hope the newspapers of the city will send out a clarion call through news and editorial columns calling attention to the fact that it is not only our privilege but our duty to vote Wednesday."

Hudson, of Atlanta; two daughters, Mrs. S. P. Lindsay and Mrs. B. K. Laverett, both of Atlanta; and a brother, C. D. Wright, of Atlanta.

J. A. SOUTH.
J. A. South, 72, of Cambridge avenue, College Park, died Monday afternoon at his residence. Besides his widow he is survived by four sons, W. J. South, of College Park; J. F. South, of Riverside, and Atticus and Harry South, of College Park. The body was taken to the chapel of A. C. Hemperley.

FORSYTH PLAYERS MAKE GREAT HIT IN "ICEBOUND"

"Ice-bound," the biggest thing the Forsyth players have produced in all their 90 weeks of success in Atlanta, alternately warmed and chilled a big audience at its first performance in the Lyric theater Monday night.

As Miss Boots Wooster, Fred Raymond, Jr., and the others unfolded the story in all its wealth of human incident and human feeling, it was easy for Atlanta playgoers to see why "Icebound" was awarded the Pulitzer prize for 1922-1923 as "the best play by an American author based on a recognized phase of American life."

The Lyric theater management is to be commended for bringing so high a type of entertainment to Atlanta. The work of the players has demonstrated that they can produce such plays effectively and the applause of the audience indicated that Atlanta playgoers are ready to give them an appreciative reception.

The central figure is a girl, a poor relation of a wealthy family. Since the first blush of girlhood she has loved the blacksheep of the family, a wild careless youth who has broken the heart of his mother and the laws of man. At the time the play opens the mother is dying and the man is being hunted on a charge of arson. All his family has turned against him.

He comes back, facing prison to kneel again at his mother's bedside before she dies. The situation is one that suggests melodrama. Most playwrights would have made it melodrama. But Owen Davis, the author of a dozen Broadway successes, turns it into one of the most smashingly real situations that has been seen on the Lyric stage. The Forsyth players carry it through with a keen appreciation of its possibilities and an understanding of its needs that makes it thrillingly effective.

There Atlantans are in the cast. Isaac Boorestyn, little Atlanta boy, is the young son who causes many laughs with tactless remarks; Mary McCool, Atlanta girl, is an old maid sister; Marion Bonnell, the Atlanta girl who won instant popularity as the comical chorus girl in "The Gold Diggers," is the angular housekeeper for the Jordans in "Icebound."

"Icebound" will be presented each night this week and at matinee today, Thursday and Saturday.
STEWART GELDERS.
